Fear 3 Flyers Die In Crash

CALGARY, Aug. 16.—(CP)—As search parties struggled to break their way through miles of rough country in the uninhabited area west of Bragg Creek, hope was waning this morning for the safety of three airmen whose plane crashed sometime late Thursday.

When the plane was finally spotted from the air at 1:30 Friday afternoon, after hours of intensive aerial search, no sign of life could be seen in the vicinity. Officials this morning expressed the fear that none of the craft's three occupants had survived the crash.

The three were: Flying Officer I. M. S. Brown, 21, son of Brigadier J. Sutherland Brown of Victoria; Leading Aircraftman A. M. R. McGruther, 26, son of William McGruther of Edmonton, and Leading Aircraftman F. W. Greenfield, 22, son of J. Greenfield, Madison, Sask.

EXPLOSION HEARD

A further indication that it was unlikely any of the men had survived the crash was seen in a report from the fire look-out on Moose Mountain, an estimated four or five miles from the scene of the crash. The look-out reported having heard a loud explosion at about 5:30 Thursday afternoon.

Nothing was known this morning of the whereabouts of William Shankland, forest ranger at Bragg Creek, who set out early Friday afternoon to break his way through about 15 miles to the

More Aviation Gas

Washington, Aug. 16.—(AP)—Petroleum Co-ordinator Harold Ickes announced today the oil industry was drafting plans to double its refining capacity for 100-octane aviation gasoline, thereby to prevent a shortage for the fighting planes of Britain, Russia and the expanding United States air forces. "The availability of adequate supplies of oil and gasoline will determine the conflict now raging abroad," Ickes declared.

News Awaited As F.D.R. Back At Maine Port

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

ROCKLAND, Me., Aug. 16.—(AP)—President Roosevelt arrived at his down-east fishing port today amid prospects that an immediate press conference might bring from him eagerly awaited details of his conferences at sea with Winston Churchill.

Aboard the White House yacht Potomac, Mr. Roosevelt rounded the breakwater light early this afternoon, ending a cruise on which he had broken all precedents by leaving American soil to meet the head of a government of a warring nation and draft an eight-point program which spoke of "the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny."

William D. Hassett, of the White House secretariat, rode out into

Hon. Ian Mackenzie, minister of pensions and national health, who passed through Edmonton Friday evening on his way back to Ottawa.

British Spirit Is Praised By Ian Mackenzie

Praising the spirit of the people of Great Britain for their courage and determination in the face of hardship caused by German air raids, Hon. Ian Mackenzie, minister of pensions and national health in the Mackenzie King government and M.P. for Vancouver Centre, passed through Edmonton Friday evening en route to Ottawa. Mr. Mackenzie has been paying a short visit to his constituency.

He was met at the C.N.R. depot by a group of Edmonton friends including Charles E. Campbell, R. C. Marshall and Neil D. Maclean, K.C.

Mr. Mackenzie recently flew to London to present Canada's Torch of Victory to Prime Minister Winston Churchill on behalf of the people of the Dominion. He had three interviews with the British prime minister during his visit and was greatly impressed with the marvelous manner in which Mr. Churchill was bearing up under the terrific strain of responsibility.

BOMB DAMAGE

Mr. Mackenzie said he found only slight evidence of damage from German bombs in London and declared that none of the city's power stations or bridges had been hit.

While in Britain Mr. Mackenzie visited Canadian troops under Lt. Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of the Canadian Corps.

"The Canadian troops hold the number one spot among the forces defending Great Britain," said the minister. "They are magnificently trained, in wonderful condition and in excellent spirits and are aching for an opportunity to come to grips with the Germans."

Mr. Mackenzie inquired as to crop conditions in the Edmonton district and also in the Peace River country. He also expressed interest in the reception accorded to Air Commodore His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent here last Thursday and was pleased when informed that the Duke's reception in Edmonton had been the warmest of the tour.

The minister left for the east after a stop-over of 45 minutes.

H. H. Parlee Is Re-Appointed Varsity Board

Re-appointment of H. H. Parlee, K.C., prominent city barrister, as chairman of the board of governors of the University of Alberta, was announced Saturday by the provincial government.

Mr. Parlee resigned last May in protest over the action of the University senate in withdrawing the invitation extended by the board to Premier William Aberhart to accept an honorary degree of doctor of laws and to deliver the main address at the convocation exercises on May 19.

Dr. A. R. Kerr, president of the University, turned in his resignation, also in protest, at the same time.

The government announced then that the resignations would be held in abeyance. Then, on June 30, Mr. Parlee's term automatically expired.

WOULD RETIRE

Later it was announced by Premier Aberhart that Dr. Kerr would retire from the presidency on Aug. 31 next, that date indicating the resignation was accepted. This followed a second letter from Dr. Kerr urging that this action be taken.

Re-appointment of Mr. Parlee indicates refusal of the government to accept his resignation. He has been re-appointed as from June 30 last.

R.A.F. Torpedoes Four Axis Vessels

CAIRO, Aug. 16.—(AP)—Three merchant ships and one destroyer were torpedoed in a fleet air arm attack on an Axis convoy in the Mediterranean Thursday night, Royal Air Force Middle East headquarters announced today.

It said two Axis tankers also were probably sunk by R.A.F. bombers in the Central Mediterranean yesterday.

(Two more Axis merchant ships, a fully laden 5,000-ton steamship and a sailing vessel of about 1,000 tons were reported by the Netherlands Admiralty in London as sunk by Netherlands submarines serving with the British fleet in the Mediterranean.)

Kent Inspects Munitions Plant

By MARSHALL BATEMAN

WINNIPEG, Aug. 16.—(CP)—The Duke of Kent, riding in an open automobile, today received cheers from hundreds of citizens who gathered at street corners as he drove from Government House to Defence Industries, Limited, a war supply plant near Winnipeg.

The ducal party, like anyone else visiting the plant, left their cigarettes and matches with guards as they entered the iron-fenced grounds. During the brief stop M. J. Watson explained the plant operations in detail and the King's youngest brother frequently stopped to chat with workers.

Interpreting War News

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

THERE are indications that Hitler may make a climactic effort to crush Russia quickly as an answer to the "Atlantic charter" drafted by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt.

At least one more supreme attempt to roll up the Red armies in the North and the Ukraine and Leningrad is clearly within the power of the Nazi war machine before snow flies, and the day's news suggests it may already be taking form.

The 10 days that have elapsed since the main offensive was shifted southward to the Ukraine is sufficient for a formidable gathering of forces from another attempt to effect a decisive break-through in the direction of Moscow or Leningrad. The signs appear to point to another transfer of emphasis.

While the extent of the German triumphs in the Ukraine uncertain and the next offensive move a question, it is pertinent to recall that at the start of the invasion the most expert neutral military

Picture Release Dismays British

BALTIMORE, Aug. 16—(AP)—Paul Patterson, publisher of the Baltimore Sun papers, said in a cabled story from London today that the British ministry of information "was dismayed" to find that pictures of the Churchill-Roosevelt meeting at sea had been released to United States newspapers "without warning" and before their release to British newspapers.

Patterson said the photographs had been intended for simultaneous release in both countries after British censorship, and added:

"The serious phase is the fact that one or more pictures released not only gave a view of the ship aboard which the meeting occurred but also revealed the name of the ship.

"Behind this lies a story of con-

HUNS SUFFERING "FRIGHTFUL LOSSES"

Nazis Are Stopped By 3 Russ Armies

By NED RUSSELL

LONDON, Aug. 16. — (BUP) — Three great Russian armies have smashed or slowed ferocious German offensives all the way from Lake Onega on the Finnish front to the Ukraine, authoritative Russian sources asserted today.

Marshals Klementi Voroshilov, Semyon Timoshenko and Semyon Budenny have thrown fresh masses of men and material into the front and the Germans are suffering frightful losses in a desperate attempt to continue their third grand scale offensive of the war, it was said.

On the far northern front, Russian troops have smashed German and Finnish attacks west of Lake Onega, northeast of Lake Ladoga, aimed at the Leningrad - Murmansk Arctic railroad, authoritative Russian spokesman said.

BEAT OFF ATTACKS

In the Kholm area of the Leningrad-Moscow front, 170 miles west of Moscow and 110 miles from the Leningrad - Moscow railroad at which the Germans are striking, the Russians are beating off savage German attacks and inflicting heavy losses, it was said.

In the Smolensk area, where the Germans attacked without pause for a month in their attempt to break the Russian line defending the Moscow region, the Germans are now digging in, Russian informants said.

On the Ukrainian front, it was asserted the Russians have regained with grave losses a heavy attack west of Kiev, Russian informants said.

The Germans attacked with everything they had on an exceedingly narrow front, according to the Russian advices, and were beaten back without material gain. It was indicated that the attack led by massed tanks, had been definitely smashed.

"UNDER CONTROL"

The informants admitted that in the Uman sector of the Ukrainian front the Germans had gained "a certain success" and that on the part of that front the situation was ex-

British Capture Two Axis Vessels

LONDON, Aug. 16—(CP)—The admiralty announced today two Axis supply ships, identified as the 3,667-ton German vessel Norderney and the 4,272-ton Italian Stella, had been intercepted on the high seas by British naval units.

Neither the time nor place of seizure was disclosed.

The Norderney was built in 1922 at Emden for South American trade. She was reported last on March 17 at Bordeaux, on the risk of the British blockade with a cargo of hides, rubber and other products. Two officers of the German embassy at Rio De Janeiro were reported to have boarded the vessel at that time.

The Stella, built in 1923 at Sunderland, was in European trade until the outbreak of war and was last reported to be anchored with three other Italian ships June 8, 1940, at Recife, Brazil.

British Women Needed In War

NEWCASTLE - ON - TYNE, Eng., Aug. 16.—(CP)—David Margesson, war secretary, appealed for the war services of 100,000 women today.

"Germany has an infinitely greater pool of man power to draw from than we have," he said. "So the only practicable way to beat them is by utilizing our woman power in addition to our man power. This has been tried on a limited scale and the experiment proved a success. Now with your help we are determined to expand it.

"Frankly, the position is that Britain needs the service of 100,000 women at once. More will be needed later."

Tour Of Kitsilano Band In Province Has Been Cancelled

VANCOUVER, Aug. 16.—(CP)—At the request of Alberta health department officials, Kitsilano Boys' Band of Vancouver has cancelled a scheduled tour of the prairie provinces because of the prevalence of infantile paralysis there.

The band leaves tonight for a tour of British Columbia towns in aid of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

Japs Getting Set To Attack Siberia

By CLARK LEE

SHANGHAI, Aug. 16.—(AP)—Japan is getting set as fast as she can to attack Russian Siberia, and the blow—if it comes—will be within the next two or three weeks, it was agreed today in high Japanese, German and neutral quarters here.

Foreign military informants said they believe Tokyo's final decision will depend on the course of fighting in European Asia between the Red army and the Germans.

A smashing German victory, it was held by these sources, would be regarded by Japanese army leaders as providing an opportunity for Japan to realize her half-century-old ambitions regarding Siberia.

A high Japanese officer said he did not anticipate major Japanese-Russian hostilities "within the immediate future." Asked how long that covered, he replied: "It is somewhat longer than one week."

"As for the more remote future," he added, "I can make no guarantee there won't be any major fighting."

Military experts agree that weather conditions in Siberia make it essential that Japan strike before the end of September or postpone action until spring.

The officer stated bluntly that Japan "has now completed the movement of troops to Manchukuo and all that remains is to complete transportation of supplies and equipment."

He would not divulge the exact strength of Japanese forces in the north, but hinted the number was close to 400,000.

U.S. Board To Put Squeeze On Japs

By JOHN R. BEAL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(BUP)—The economic defence board headed by Vice-President Henry A. Wallace will direct its first efforts toward exerting trade pressure on Japan and aiding Free French territory in Africa, it was learned today.

The board, created by President Roosevelt to direct economic warfare against the Axis, formulated the program at a meeting this week. Wallace confirmed that two projects were underway, but declined to discuss them. The board will meet again next week.

The nature of economic measures to be taken against Japan could not be learned. It was pointed out, however, that the government already holds the instrumentalities for completely shutting off trade at any time desired. Japanese funds in the United States have been frozen and can be used only with treasury permission. All trade with Japan is under licensing restrictions which can be used to stop it entirely.

Aid to the Free French is expected to take the form of purchases of palm and vegetable oils produced by the De Gaullist governments in Central Africa. It is understood that the Free French have about 300,000 tons of these products available. Their purchase by the United States would serve the double purpose of providing the Free French with a market they desperately need and at the same time prevent Germany from acquiring vegetable oils in which the Reich is deficient.

Russia Believed Far From Beaten

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(CP)—A request by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt for a three-power conference with Russia was taken here today as a sign that Britain and United States consider Russia far from beaten.

Although the Soviet army was reported retreating before a fierce German offensive in the Ukraine, war commentators emphasized the message to Stalin referred to "consideration of a long-term policy," apparently indicating an expectation the war would last a long time.

At the same time the fact that two nations pledged Russia "the very maximum of supplies" brought a new crop of rumors that British would land troops in the northern wastes of Russia to keep open the important Arctic supply line.

Supplies from Britain and America could enter Russia by two obvious routes, going through the Arctic ports of Murmansk and Archangel or across the Pacific to Vladivostok. If Japan entered the war against Russia one of these supply lines would be gone, while a big German-Finnish advance in the north would cut the second.

For this reason, informed sources said, Russia, the United States and Britain would be anxious to consolidate the northern front and make at least one supply line safe.

Russians Bomb Berlin, Stettin

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(AP)—Berlin and the German Baltic port of Stettin were heavily attacked by Russian bombers overnight, the Moscow radio, heard here by C.B.S., reported today.

"Many incendiary and high explosive bombs of heavy calibre were dropped on Berlin and Stettin," the broadcast said.

"A great number of explosions and fires were observed in both cities.

"All our planes have returned to their bases."

Finnish Claims

HELSINKI, Aug. 16.—(AP)—A Finnish army correspondent today claimed capture from the Russians of the towns of Lahdenpohja and Jaakkima along the northwestern edge of Lake Ladoga.

Women Needed

David Margesson, above, war secretary, today appealed for 100,000 British women to assist in the war. He declared that with Germany having a greater pool of man power to draw from, it was necessary for British to utilize its woman power as much as possible.

Gas Rationing Edict Hits 18 Eastern States

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16—(AP)—A sweeping gasoline rationing system for the eastern United States, meaning a cut of about 20 per cent in the fuel available for automobiles used for pleasure or "non-essential" purposes, was set up Friday by the office of price administration and civilian supply, effective immediately.

The action, unprecedented in the United States in peace-time, did not involve the issuance of ration cards to individual automobile operators, but slashed by 10 per cent the supplies delivered to service stations.

20 PER CENT CUT

However, it was estimated the cut would be about 20 per cent as applied to "non-essential" motor cars because it was announced that the supplies for fire department vehicles, ambulances, commercial and agricultural activities and other essential services would not be reduced at all.

The announcement said "it is expected that more severe curtailments will be necessary in the future."

Operators of filling stations were invested with responsibility to distribute the gasoline equitably among some 10,000,000 customers. Officials would not say what plans had been made for enforcing the order, but expected that oil companies will comply with it.

The 7 p.m. curfew on gasoline sales in the east will continue in Bombers Of R.A.F. Attack Railways

LONDON, Aug. 16 — (CP) — Bombers escorted by fighters attacked railway communications across the channel in German-occupied France today, following up a scouting and offensive sweep by Royal Air Force fighter squadrons.

It was stated authoritatively that seven German fighters were shot down with the loss of three British planes.

3 Nations Will Meet In Moscow

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(CP)—Britain and the United States were reported authoritatively tonight to have won a Russian promise of active participation in a "stop Japan" movement in return for a sharply stepped up program of war aid to Moscow.

The threat of action by the Russian armies of the Far East was expected by many observers to put the brakes on the Japanese southward expansion in view of the three-power talks in Moscow which Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt proposed and which Premier Stalin quickly accepted.

The result may be, it was said, that Japan will stop for the time being at least with the occupation of Indo-China bases, and instead, try to serve her own and her Axis partners' interests by attacks on Siberia to cut the United States-Vladivostok supply line.

MOSCOW, Aug. 16.—(AP)—Joseph Stalin agreed to a British-United States-Russian conference for joint opposition to Nazi Germany and the exchange of messages with British and American envoys implied a complete pooling of resources of the three powers.

The conference proposal was conveyed to the Russian leader yesterday in a joint personal message from Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt, delivered by the British and United States ambassadors, Sir Stafford Cripps and Lieutenant-General Standard.

One phrase out of the exchange of invitation and acceptance described one proposed subject of the conference as "distribution of raw materials and arms."

EXPRESSES THANKS

Stalin told the ambassadors he was ready to "take all necessary steps" for the conference.

Stalin received the ambassadors at the Kremlin, where they delivered to him a joint note from Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt.

The premier expressed to them the thanks of the Soviet government for the "prompt and friendly aid" contained in the note and said he would expedite arrangements for the proposed conversations.

Foreign Commissar Molotov attended the conference.

CANADIAN SPINNERS AND WEAVERS TOIL

Busy Supplying Empire's Armed Forces With Clothing

Humming Cotton Mills In Quebec Province Hit Tempo Said Impossible

By EDWARD SCHRADER

MONTREAL, Aug. 16.—(BUP)—Seventeen thousand spinners and weavers are toiling in 14 humming cotton mills in Quebec province, supplying the Empire's armed services with clothing and equipment at a tempo hitherto believed impossible.

The Dominion Textile Company alone has, since the outbreak of war, produced enough fabric to girdle the globe at the equator with a strip 18 inches wide, and sufficient cloth to make well over 1,375,000 uniforms.

Being turned out at incredulous speed are drill for battle dress; duck for tents, kit bags, gun covers and bandoliers; tarpauling for the trucks of mechanized units; tire fabrics for the motorized units; camouflaged cloth and netting; parachute attachments and even shoe thread to stitch the boots that march against Hitler.

EXCLUSIVE

FOR GAS MASKS

At the Montreal cotton mills at Valleyfield, 30,000 yards of cloth have been produced to fit into gas masks as disinfecting pieces. Here too is manufactured fabric for camouflage anti-gas cloth. Fine combed Egyptian cotton is used to make a lawn-type fabric which is kindest to enemy protuberances. At the Magog print works of the Dominion Textile Company this is printed with a scientific camouflage design and chemically treated to make the cloth non-porous and gas-resistant. The material is used to make light-weight, sketching garments.

From the Drummondville Cotton Company come millions of pounds of the special cord fabric required in the tires of the mechanized units, and some 11,000,000 pounds have been shipped England, South Africa, India, Australia and Canadian points.

CAMOUFLAGE NETS

Huge camouflage nets under which the mighty snouts of artillery hide from preying sky raiders are also produced at the Shirring Drummondville plant. Some of these weather-proofed nets are dyed brown, some green and some a staggered pattern of both colors When mounted on poles and fixed with branches and twigs these nets throw a confusing shadow on the ground, and from above look like "just so much enemy eyes above.' Twenty-five thousand of these nets, varying in size, have been sent to the U.K. and 35 feet. have been produced to date.

But all are not destined for the war front. Behind the lines and in remote sections of the world saboteurs are plotting to cripple the war effort at its source. Thus many nets are employed as anti-saboteur equipment guarding vital dams and power stations. Stretched across a river, upstream South of the bridge protection, these nets catch any mines or other destructive weapons possibly floating down.

An indication of the tremendous volume of textiles produced by this vital Canadian war industry can be seen in figures on the mill's total output since the beginning of the war. The Dominion Textile company provided 1,500,000 yards of tent duck for Canada; 650,000 yards of woollen shirting; 500,000 yards of a single yarn duck for uniforms pockets and linings; 300,000 yards of similar duck for naval uniforms; 600,000 yards of special drill ordered by England, and 1,000,000 yards of warn for webbing; over one million yards of ground sheet fabric; and 750,000 towels.

10,000 YARDS A WEEK

The Montreal cotton mills at Valleyfield have manufactured 30,000 yards of gas mask cloth and aircraft fabrics are being produced at the rate of 10,000 yards a week; 4,750,000 yards of cotton drill shirting; 6,500,000 yards of regular drill and 75,000 yards of drill for naval uniforms have been woven.

But these front line soldiers, clad in overalls instead of khaki, have not restricted their war contribution to clothing in the Empire's textile industry. Most of the employees buy war savings certificates regularly, a subscription which suppliies some $10,000 a month to federal war coffers.

No less important than arms and men in this war are textiles and the Canadian textile industry has so geared its production tempo that Allied soldiers will not want for clothing, tents or even humble shoe strings.

opinion held that the drive directly toward Moscow was of primary importance

What took place on the flanks, in the pressed judgment of an outstanding American official analyst, was in the nature of a diversion.

The axis of the drive to destroy Russia's main field forces was foreseen as the Brest-Litovsk-Moscow line, and events bore out the prediction.

A Berlin calculation was upset by the promptness with which President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill accepted Soviet Russia as a recruit in the struggle to curb Nazi aggression, thus spiking the attempt to make the invasion a world crusade against Bolshevism.

Then there was the widespread expectation that Berlin soon would undertake a peace offensive. The Red army's stubbornness has postponed any such coup. Now it may be that the declaration of British and American war aims has headed it off entirely.

Stalin Agrees To Joint Conference With Britain, United States On Plans

LAUD U. S. HELP

"The United States government, as seen from the (eight-point) declaration and as correctly illustrated by the Soviet-American agreements, concluded in Washington August 2, considers as its direct task the extending of maximum aid to countries repulsing the German-Fascist murderers and sacrificing the blood and life of their sons with the aim of freeing the civilized world from the Hitler barbarians," said Izvestia.

Pravda pointed out that United States assistance to Britain "was not and is not restricted to armaments, but measures as extensive patrol activities by American warships and the dispatch of American troops to Iceland have, to a considerable extent, assisted Britain in solution of problems connected with the battle of the Atlantic. . . .

"In this war of liberation we shall not be alone In this great war we shall have loyal allies in the people of Europe and America considering the German people who are enslaved by the Hitlerite despots. Our war for freedom will merge with the struggle of the peoples of Europe and America for their independence. for democratic liberties.

MAKES UNITED FRONT

"It will be a united front of people standing for freedom and against enslavement and the threat of enslavement by Hitler's Fascist armies . . . the Soviet people will acclaim the decisions accepted at the conference of the leaders of the politics of the United States and Great Britain, seeing in them a pledge of further and still more active struggle against the Hitlerite oppression which should be immediately embodied into wide practical measures against the Fascist invaders for the final annihilation of Nazi tyranny."

JOINT PROPOSAL SENT BY LEADERS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(AP) —Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt followed up their historic sea conference Friday night with a joint proposal to Premier Joseph Stalin that high British and American representatives meet with him in Moscow to discuss allocation of war supplies to the Soviet Union.

The message made public here last night was delivered to Stalin by the British and United States ambassadors in Moscow during the afternoon.

The two leaders of the western powers praised the "splendid defence" of the Soviet Union "against the Nazi attack" and asserted that the United States and Britain were "co-operating to provide you the very maximum of supplies that you urgently need."

"Already many shiploads have left our shores and more will leave in the immediate future," the message said.

LONG-TERM POLICY

The Prime Minister and President told Premier Stalin that it was necessary to consider a long-term policy because "there is still a long and hard path to be traversed before there can be won that complete victory without which our efforts and sacrifice would be wasted."

They said the war raged now upon many fronts and before it was over "further fighting fronts" may be developed. Such therefore being the situation, they said and when the immense British and U.S. resources "can best be used to further the greatest extent of each common effort" and this, they asserted, applied equally to manufactured war supplies and raw materials.

"The needs and demands of your and our armed services can only be determined in the light of the full knowledge of the many factors which must be taken into consideration in the decisions that we make," the message continued.

"In order that all of us may be in a position to arrive at speedy decisions as to the apportionment of our joint resources, we suggest that representatives be asked to be held at Moscow to which we should send high representatives who could discuss these matters directly with you.

QUICK ACTION PROMISED

"If this conference appeals to you, we want you to know that pending the decisions of that conference we shall continue to send supplies and material as rapidly as possible.

"We realize fully how vitally important to the defeat of Hitlerism is the valiant and steadfast resistance of the Soviet Union, and we feel therefore that we must not in any circumstances fail to act quickly and immediately in this matter on planning the program for the future allocation of our joint resources."

The prime minister and president decided on the message to Stalin after a study of the report of Harry Hopkins, the president's lease-lend administrator, on his talks in Moscow with Stalin and other Soviet leaders.

The message said the Prime Minister and President after considering the report Hopkins had consulted together as to "how best our two countries can help your country in the splendid struggle that you are making against the Nazi attack."

The message to Stalin constituted the first concrete move disclosed by the President and Prime Minister to put into action quickly the program they formulated at sea to achieve "the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny."

WARNING TO JAPAN

In their statement accompanying the eight-point joint declaration of war aims Friday the two nations said they had examined the whole problem of the supply of war munitions to those countries actively engaged in resisting aggression." This, they said, included the supply problems of the Soviet Union

The message to Stalin clearly showed the urgency with which they consider the question of getting war materials to Russia, now hard pressed to hold back the advancing German armies.

The implication in the message that "further fighting fronts" may develop was considered here to be a reference directly to the terse far eastern situation.

It was regarded in some quarters as a warning to Japan that the President and Prime Minister had discussed that possibility and agreed when and how Anglo-American military resistance would be offered to any further Japanese expansion in the south-west Pacific.

A Japanese attack on the Siberian provinces of Russia also appeared to be envisaged as a possible new front.

CONFIDENCE IN RUSSIA

Russia has had a military purchasing mission in the United States for several weeks and a British military mission has been in Russia but the message to Stalin indicated that closer co-ordination and more complete information on Russian military needs are considered necessary.

The message also appeared to reflect the confidence of Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt in Russia's ability to continue the fight against Germany and a belief that a large-scale diversion of Russian military forces could be made to the Soviet Union.

The United States already has placed Russian orders here on a priority basis, promised unlimited licenses for exports of available supplies and "favorable consideration" of Russian requests for American shipping facilities to expedite delivery

Lawyers To Meet

TORONTO, Aug. 16.—(CP)—John Stanton, Vancouver lawyer visiting here, said Friday a Dominion-wide conference of lawyers now is being planned for the purpose of pooling experience of lawyers in handling cases of interned persons in an effort to facilitate further appeals. He said the meeting likely would be held here early in September.

tremely confused. But even here, they asserted, the situation was everywhere under control. Moscow had denied all German claims that the Germans had disorganized Budenny's Ukrainian army.

British authoritative sources, who had been increasingly pessimistic in the last few days over immediate developments as the Germans started their third great drive, said today that developments on the Russian front were more cheerful and more reassuring.

They said the Russians seemed to be withdrawing steadily behind the Dnieper. The admitted German success in the Uman area, they said, implied that the Russians were still withdrawing there.

Both Russian and British advices indicated that Budenny planned an orderly withdrawal behind the Dnieper, to form a new and strong defence line along that broad, swift stream.

MOSCOW, Aug. 16 (AP)—Fighting was reported raging today from end to end of the long front with Germany, and the Red army said it was putting up an especially determined opposition in the Ukraine.

"In the course of the night of Aug. 15-16 our troops continued fighting with the enemy along the whole front," one report declared, "and with special stubbornness in the south."

Specific points were not mentioned.

It was the second consecutive bulletin to omit names of fighting fronts. An earlier communique today indicated the Nazis were putting heavy pressure on the Leningrad and Ukraine flanks.

German planes flying against Moscow late last night were reported dispersed before reaching the city.

BERLIN, Aug. 16—(AP)—Hitler declared through his high command today that the situation in southern Russia is moving "successfully according to plan."

As the Nazi armies rounded out the fourth week of the march to the east, the German press lacking specific information fell back to speculating on military problems facing both sides.

Whether Soviet Marshal Semeon Budenny could form a Dnieper river defence line to check the Nazi sweep in the Ukraine, now threatening that territory's coal and mineral belt, was a favored subject.

westward of Jake Fullerton's ranch at Bragg Creek to the scene of the crash.

A search party from the No. 2 service flying training school, Currie, headed by Wing Cmdr. A. D. Ross, officer commanding, and two medical officers left at 1:30 a.m. in ambulance and other vehicles, to attempt to find a way in the scene. They carried food and full equipment.

TAKE MORE EQUIPMENT

Shortly before 1 a.m., Flight Lt. G. M. Martin returned to the No. 3 S.F.T.S. with a report that the Currie search party had made a halt for the night. Another party left the school at 1:30 a.m. with further equipment, and it was expected that a determined drive through the rough bush country to the scene of the crash would be begun about dawn.

It was believed that it might be noon before the search parties would reach the crashed plane. Several hours more might elapse before the bodies could be brought out, although it was thought possible that searchers might communicate their findings to aircraft.

AIRMAN'S PARENTS VISITING AT BANFF

Mr. and Mrs. William McGruther, parents of LAC. Alexander M. R. McGruther were visiting Banff when the plane in which their son was flying crashed.

LAC. McGruther was born in Scotland 20 years ago. Mr. McGruther served in the World War with a famous Scottish regiment and came here following cessation of hostilities.

LAC. McGruther attended South Side schools and joined the R.C.A.F. last January and he was posted to No. 3 S.F.T.S., Calgary.

Only recently, it was learned, his family received a letter from him telling of his first solo flight and the "fun" he was having in making progress toward becoming one of the growing legion of R.C.A.F. crews to battle Hitler's legions.

A brother, William, is at present at Yellowknife.

effect, at least for the time, it was indicated.

"DUE TO HITLER"

The Secretary of the Interior, Harold Ickes, who recommended the action, said the threatened eastern fuel shortage was due to "Mr. Hitler, and Mr. Hitler alone." The shortage was caused by the transfer of coast-wise tankers to British service.

Ickes indicated that the middle west and the Pacific coast might face a "gasoline pinch," but a definite conservation plan for those areas was not specified, however.

States affected by the action would include Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, the District of Columbia and parts of Florida.

The action was taken, the announcement said, as an emergency measure to bring consumption of gasoline in this area into line with transport facilities. These facilities have been reduced by transfer of petroleum-carrying ships from the coast-wise service to British.

CANADA MAY FOLLOW U.S. ACTION IF ASKED

TORONTO, Aug. 16—(CP)—Rationing of gasoline supplies to filling stations in the Eastern United States, announced at Washington Friday night, will "likely" result in similar action in Canada, G. R. Cottrelle, federal oil controller, said in a brief statement here last night.

"We will likely do the same thing but to what extent as yet we do not know," the statement said.

"In any event it will be as much for public as a matter of fact because of a reduction in sales, deliveries have already been reduced."

British Use More Planes In Day Than Nazis In Four Weeks

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(CP)—The number of German bombers which have crossed the British coast during the past four weeks is well under 300, an authoritative source said today. By contrast, more than 300 British bombers roared over Germany Thursday night and dropped tons of super-bombs.

flicting policy in respect to publicity attending the meeting. For security reasons the British naturally were anxious that the time and means of travel decided upon by the British prime minister be kept completely secret until the journey was finished.

"On the other hand, the ministry of information, foreseeing the dramatic and historic phases of the meeting, took great pains to provide a special staff to record the event for history and to supply a complete account for the press.

BRITISH GET NONE

"Intimations were received here to the effect that the appearance of this staff of writers and cameramen was not favorably received by the president, who apparently kept his plans carefully guarded, even from his secretariat, and was unprepared for such an extensive publicity program."

Patterson said the picture-taking finally was permitted, and the photographs sent to New York with the expectation that "all the pictures would be flown back to London for selection and censorship" and simultaneous distribution.

"Through some disarrangement of plans not explained here the pictures were turned loose to the American press and the British press was left helpless," although a limited number of prints were radioed back to London.

EXPECT DETAILS

Presidential aides assumed Mr. Roosevelt would hold a press conference here before leaving for Washington by special train. From it, reporters hoped to obtain the first detailed account of the epochal conferences with Mr. Churchill and answers to questions puzzling statesmen and the world.

That the conferences aboard British and United States warships, somewhere in the North Atlantic, dealt with more immediate and possibly more significant issues than an ultimate peace was taken for granted in many world capitals.

Foremost among the questions thus far unanswered was whether the head of a nation still at peace had worked out with the chief of government of a country at war a specific plan for bringing about what they termed "the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny."

Had Mr. Churchill and Roosevelt determined on possible joint action in the far east?

Has they discussed the battle of the Atlantic, convoys or other means of trying to guarantee safe delivery of American war equipment to Britain?

Might another multi-billion dollar Lease-Lend appropriation be expected soon?

Would Russia be asked to subscribe to the Churchill-Roosevelt declaration of an eight-point post-war policy "on which they base their hopes for a better future for the world?"

"TANK RADICALS" DOMINATE HIGH COMMAND

Tank-Mindedness Guarantees Success On Battlefield

Even Defence Minister Has Been Tank Convert Since Battle In 1918

By KIM BEATTIE

LAST summer was a period of upheaval in every army which knew, or suspected, that it might some day face Hitler's Wehrmacht. The imperative need after the Fall of France was obvious. That was a new type of army, one which must gain hitting strength from armored fighting vehicles, speed from wheels and gasoline, sustained power from close-knit cohesion of all fast-travelling combat corps striking as one. There was a major reorganization in the American Army, which possessed only a single experimental tank brigade in June, 1940. There was another, which reached revolutionary proportions, in the British Army under the new Chief of the Imperial General Staff, General Sir John Dill, who had even combined tanks and airplanes against Arabs.

As a result the British Army was swept clean of tacticians with the "maginot mind", and mechanization experts now fill every key post. Every higher command at home, in the Middle East and Far East, is held by officers known for their progressive thinking. Many of these were even once known as "tank radicals". Dill, Brooke, Wavell, Wilson, Haining, Alexander, and a host of newcomers might all be included in that category. The Commander of the Royal Armoured Corps, Major-Gen. Giffard le Q. Martel, is the man who built the first one-man tank in his garage. Sir Alan Brooke, Commander of the Home Forces, in which the Canadian Corps is serving, was described as "The only man who seemed to know how to handle tanks" even during the French blitzkrieg. It was only through his interest, and that of progressives like him, that such unorthodox contraptions as "The Travelling Bath-tub" which became the Bren-gun carrier, were fostered and adopted.

Of all the swiftly rebuilding armies, the Canadians were blessed with several assets which have proved invaluable. In proportion to its size, the Canadian Army already had a tentative tank formation which was probably larger than that of any other army. But there we could make armoured troops easier than most nations, for almost all our recruits could already drive cars, do running motor repairs, and were naturally mechanically inclined. We also knew that Canadian troops would be at their best in the type of wide-open, fast-moving warfare which they seemed destined to fight.

IN SAFE HANDS

But the greatest of Canadian Army assets was founded on leadership, the most important factor of all. Reorganization to bring scientific soldiers and mechanization enthusiasts to the top was not necessary in the Canadian Army.

They were already there! The destiny of the Canadian Army was already safely in the hands of three men who were nothing if not tank-minded.

There was tremendous advantage to Canadian Army leadership in the first place, in the man who stands behind the two senior generals, Lieut.-General A. G. L. McNaughton, the Corps Commander, and Major-General H. D. G. Crerar, the Chief of Staff, in their effort to build an army which was offensive in both spirit and arms.

Hon. J. L. Ralston became Minister of National Defence while the German blitzkrieg into France last year was still in progress. It was surely fitting to find the War Ministry in Canada, in this critical hour, in the hands of an ex-battalion commander who saw tanks breaking the trench-lock in the last war. It is safe to say that the present Minister of National Defence became unshakably tank-minded on the day he led his Nova Scotian Highlanders to the assault on Bourlon Wood. The fighting infantry colonel saw two Mark V tanks crushing machine-gun nests —and saving infantry lives—ahead of him. He did not miss the lesson.

CANADIAN ARMY TEAM

In Canada's offensive spirited and mechanize-minded Army team of McNaughton and Crerar, there is no more scientific soldier in high place in any army than the Canadian Field Commander. And there is no more convinced exponent of the machine-for-men principle, with all its attributes, than the Canadian Chief of the General Staff.

As proof of the tank mindedness of all three—the Minister and the two Generals—there is the despatch with which a Canadian armoured corps was agreed upon a year ago. Col. Ralston became Minister of Defence in June; in July General Crerar returned from England to be Chief of Staff, no doubt bringing General McNaughton's suggestions for armoured troops; the Minister's approval immediately followed, which could only mean unanimous belief in their urgent need.

McNaughton and Crerar are peculiarly well fitted to work together in creating, training and leading the modern Canadian army. They understand each other. McNaughton and Crerar have been working together—and thinking alike—ever since they were artillery staff officers in the last war. The former was Counter-Battery Staff Officer when the latter was Staff Officer, R.A., at Canadian Corps H.Q.; and when McNaughton became G.O.C. Heavy Artillery, Crerar replaced him in the counter-battery post. They and their staffs not only then worked in close co-operation, but the two future generals married and lived in the same quarters.

The Canadian Corps and the army-in-training at home is resolutely building and training to the British-Canadian co-ordinated "Army Plan" which is designed to meet and defeat the German panzers on the battlefield. That, and nothing else! Above are Defence Minister J. L. Ralston, flanked by Lieut.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, the Corps commander, and Major-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, the Chief of Staff. Below are: Major-Generals Pearkes, Odlum and Price of the 1st, 2nd and 3rd Divisions, Brigadier W. W. Worthington of the Army Tank Brigade, and Major-Gen. Montague of Canadian H.Q. in London.

For years before the outbreak of this war they labored together to have mobilization plans ready for any eventuality. Those war plans were actually laid down when General McNaughton was Chief of Staff and General Crerar was General Staff Officer (Operations) at Ottawa between 1931 to 1934. When war came, the two officers were immediately called upon, McNaughton from the National Research Council, where he was president, and Crerar from Royal Military College, where he was Commandant. General Crerar proceeded almost at once to the War Office, London, and had everything ready for the arrival of General McNaughton and the 1st Division.

FORESAW NEW WARFARE

The Field Commander has been talking mechanization and motorization for years. Long before the Germans adopted British mechanized-war practices, which were first publicly held on Salisbury Plain in 1926 and 1927, the present Corps Commander was visualizing today's warfare and the adaptability of the average Canadian to the new weapons and tactics.

The Chief of Staff also had a remarkable opportunity to absorb modern theories and doctrines in the period of his staff grounding overseas. It was during the time that the British "tank radicals" were in the ascendency over the defensive tacticians. As an instance, Harry Crerar was a Staff Officer at the "War House" in London, in charge of Home Defence, when Archie Wavell was his immediate senior. It was the same two years—1926 and 1927—when Col. Frederick Pile gave those startling demonstrations of new tactics, with fast-marshalled motorized infantry attacking behind tanks and under low-flying airplanes, which revolutionized all future armies and battlefields. There was no feature of German blitzkrieg tactics in 1940, except the "Fifth Column" which was not preached and practiced in the British Army between 1926 and 1934.

That period, prior to 1934, was the most fruitful of British military progress of all the 21 years between the two German wars. Both Canadian generals then worked with the most brilliant minds in the British Army when mechanistion was at its peak. McNaughton and Crerar ally of the same school of military thought as are Dill, Brooke and Wavell. Their doctrines are the same, and all their minds have been running on the problems and devices of mechanized-war for years.

EXCHANGE OF THEORIES

The two Canadian chiefs were taught by the British officers in the war colleges, or were their fellow students. Dill instructed McNaughton at Camberley (in the early "twenties", for instance, and Brooke and Crerar were later together at Staff College. Still later Brooke was Crerar's army instructor at Imperial Defence College. Such close contact inevitably led to exchange and absorption of each other's military theories and doctrines.

The long friendship between Dill and Brooke, McNaughton and Crerar actually started in the last war. John Dill was General Staff Officer with the Canadian Corps for a time, and Alan Brooke was Staff Officer, (Royal Artillery), at Canadian Headquarters while Andy McNaughton and Harry Crerar were there. They worked almost at each other's elbows. When Brooke went on to 1st Army H.Q. it was Crerar who succeeded him.

Without doubt the contacts made in war and peace are now paying valuable dividends. Official acquaintances were kept alive by correspondence and inimitably opened into strong friendships between military leaders whose opinions and outlook agree on momentous things. When Sir John Dill returned from India in 1939, for instance, he was the guest of General McNaughton in Ottawa.

This rise of the British progressives to meet the threat of the Nazi panzer divisions, and the unique advantage which it provides the Canadian Army, has not been noted by the public. It will be by history —perhaps as a major factor in the success of British-Canadian arms on the battlefields. It is certainly obvious between the British and Canadian armies, which is so imperative to success in action, is likely to be enormously enhanced when the leaders of the two armies have identical strategic and tactical views, when they appreciate each other, when they think and plan alike. It is a foregone conclusion that they add their forces will fight alike.

How the British-Canadian "Army Plan" of creating shock-troops for mechanized war succeeds will not be known until put to the proof in action. But there can be no doubt that the efficiency of the Canadian Army is enormously enhanced by the singleness of opinion and purpose of its leaders overseas and at home. The matchless influence of a Defence Minister, a Field Commander and a Chief of Staff holding the same faith in the new weapons and tactics, is perhaps the greatest asset Canada has in creating an army to meet the highly mechanized Germans.

It is difficult not to know a tremendous reassurance about the future of the Canadian Army on the battlefield, on remembering that the Canadian Corps overseas and the Army-in-training at home, which will reinforce it, are being built to a plan which such men as Dill and Brooke, McNaughton and Crerar, have worked out.

They hold that the process of training troops for mechanized war, which Canada is following, will put such powerful and hard-hitting shock-divisions and motorized infantry into the field that they will be dominant factors in making Hitler and Nazism a mere nightmare of memory within short years. It Canadian Headquarters while Andy means a long and perhaps tedious training grind in the fundamentals of soldiering—more than for any previous type of warfare—but no better method was ever discovered of creating efficient and self-reliant fighting men.

How the new Canadian Army will fight in theory; why tanks-in-training are basic training all-important; how staff officers and field leaders are trained, and how the search for thousands of technicians is being met, will be told in subsequent articles by Mr. Beattie.

Hon. Solon Low Tells Of His Impressions Of Duke On Visit

Says He Has Bearing Of Athlete

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Hon. Solon E. Low, acting premier and provincial treasurer, was one of those who were close to Air Commodore, H.R.H. the Duke of Kent during his brief visit here Wednesday. Mr. Low has written his impressions of the visit in the following article. —EDITOR.

By HON. SOLON E. LOW
Acting Premier and Provincial Treasurer of Alberta

Riding in on the wake of the magnificent and spontaneous welcome extended by the people of Edmonton to his royal brother, our beloved Sovereign, King George the Sixth, Air Commodore His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent visited our city Wednesday for a few brief hours, and felt again the enthusiastic welcome of the throngs of patriotic and loyal citizens who lined the route of progress for hours to catch a glimpse of this very popular member of the royal family.

It was my pleasure and very good fortune to assist in welcoming our distinguished visitor, and in the absence of the premier, to accompany His Royal Highness and his party on their inspection tour of the three air training schools in the city. I had a good opportunity to observe His Royal Highness, and I have been asked to give you briefly a few of my impressions concerning him.

AIR OF ASSURANCE

As the Duke alighted from his train at the C.N.R. depot, I could see at once that here was a very capable young man whose achievements are even now outstanding in many fields and pursuits. There was an air of assurance and a strong personality arising no doubt from the fact that he has discovered, as did Hugh Walpole, that "the whole secret of life is in being interested in one thing profoundly and in a thousand things well."

The royal cast was on Film, and I caught the strong resemblance to the other members of his distinguished family. His grip was steady and strong as he responded to each greeting, and his deep, well-modulated voice indicated that he was at ease as he looked us straight in the eyes with his own of clear grey-blue.

PLUNGED INTO TALK

I was struck with the thoroughness and dispatch with which he set about the business that brought him to Edmonton. With few preliminaries he plunged into the task of seeing first-hand what progress is being made in the Commonwealth Air Training Plan. His keen eyes overlooked nothing as he went quietly about the inspection, and I think his intellect registered indelibly every detail of the work here as he saw it.

Not satisfied to merely see, he quietly questioned scores of officers, trainees, and administrative officials for the information that will doubtless be used in further improving the great Commonwealth Training Scheme that means so much to the defence of our Empire. There were few changes of expression on his face as he proceeded, but occasionally one caught a fleeting smile of satisfaction as he observed the amazing progress being made in this monumental task of building in a few brief months an air power the like of which has not yet been known in history.

His Royal Highness was quick to see and respond to the unusual. At No. 4 Initial Training School one incident stands out as a tribute to his keenness, as well as to his diplomacy. As he came out of the building he was the first of his party to spot a sentry with an insignia that marked him as an American. Much to the surprise of the young man, who stood at the present arms and who looked very much the alert sentry, the Duke moved quickly close to him and chatted pleasantly for a minute while the escort waited. Surprised as he was, the young American on guard conducted himself with magnificent control in the finest military manner. As a gesture to our friendly and co-operative neighbors to the South the incident was priceless. Many of the escort confessed that they had not noticed that the sentry was an American.

WELL PLEASED

The Duke kept up a strong and steady pace for three hours, until he was satisfied that he had seen all that he had come to see. He told me privately that he was well pleased with the progress indicated here, as well as in the other training centres across Canada. He estimated the Commonwealth Training Plan was about 20% ahead of schedule.

A man has to be in good physical condition to be able to stand up to what Hon. Solon Low drives himself through at each of his inspection stops across Canada. I watched along behind him and noted his athletic figure. I couldn't resist the thought that here was mighty good material for a champion basketball team. With six such men as he, any coach would go into a series with great confidence.

Here was height of just the proper, footage for basket sniping ability. The long arms, capable hands and strong fingers would insure clever ball handling; the stamina and ruggedness that were quite apparent to even the casual observer would make of Prince George an answer to any coaches prayers. And when you add to all these his quiet good nature, his sporting instincts, his emotional control, and his keen intellect that quickly appraises a situation, then you have what my friend Percy Page would be pleased to call a "natural."

STAY ALL TOO SHORT

The Duke's stay with us was all too short, but his visit will long be remembered. In his wake will go out a wave of enthusiasm and loyal attachment to our Royal Family that will merge with the wake of the visit of our beloved Sovereign to roll forth throughout our land as a great unifying force among our varied peoples. We wish our Air Commodore God speed on his journey homeward and we trust sincerely that this will not be his last visit among us.

I wish to thank the people of Edmonton for the right Royal welcome extended to His Royal Highness and also for the restraint exercised by all which prevented any untoward incident from marring the even pleasantness of his stay with us.

Writes Of Duke

Fliers In Indies

BATAVIA, Aug. 16—(CP)—A group of Netherlanders have arrived here from Canada to be trained as pilots in The Netherlands East Indies Air Force, it was announced yesterday. Another similar group is expected to arrive shortly.

Moscow, first city of the Soviet and target of Hitler's panzer columns, has been vulnerable in past wars, is wide open to air attack in this one.

Founded about 1150 by George Dolgoruki, medieval Russian nobleman, on a hill overlooking a hairpin bend on the Moscow river, Moscow has been the trading, industrial and cultural centre of Russia for generations. "Holy Mother Moscow" is still a place of veneration to Russian peasants. It truly is Russia's soul.

Suburban construction in Moscow is largely wood frame. Incendiary bombs in its sprawling miles of dwelling area conceivably could cause a holocaust unequalled in this war.

Nazi airmen over the city see five cities in one, clearly defined rings symbolizing the growth of the town.

First is the Kremlin, the old fort that protected the trading post. It's the heart of Russia, where Josef Stalin lives and works, while the Communist party has its headquarters.

The next ring of expansion was the inner city, once walled. Then came the white city, the earth city and outer city in larger rings.

Roughly 4,000,000 persons live in Moscow, making it one of Europe's most congested population centres. But this very congestion has inspired measures resulting in some sources of safety in air raids. New housing has taken the form principally of tall apartment buildings of reinforced concrete, and an elaborate plan of underpasses to relieve traffic jams at street intersections offers further protection against bombers.

Much of this new building resulted from a far-reaching 10-year construction plan begun in 1935 which envisioned replacement of all ramshackle buildings with new modern structures, and construction of wide streets and avenues free of unnecessary twists and turns.

The U.S.S.R. has made definite efforts to end dependence on Moscow as prime manufactory for the country by construction of industrial centres far to the east. Nevertheless, the city remains a mighty stronghold of Russian industry, source of vital textile, metal and food production. Factories hug close to its great railroad yards and the quays of the Moscow waterfront.

Moscow, also the hub of Russia's railway system, with 11 major lines converging there, radiating to all points of the compass. A network of modern canals likewise links Moscow to key points in Russia over an excellent river transport system.

Moscow's principal defence has been the Stalin line, a system of defence-in-depth along the borders of pre-war Russia. When pierced, little but the river lines stand between Moscow and invasion. The stubborn Russians, noted defensive fighters, can make stands at the successive river lines but river lines in France failed to halt the Nazis.

Moscow has been razed by fire twice in past wars and the destruction did not cripple Russia. No one knows, however, what would be the effect of losing this nerve centre of the "new" Russia that has grown up since 1918.

The Military Angle

There seems to be a disposition to believe that the conference between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt somewhere in the Atlantic has definitely established the role of the United States as the "arsenal of democracy," as the resounding phrase has it.

In short, according to observers, this meeting has rendered even more remote than it was two weeks ago the possibility that America will shortly participate actively and militarily in the war.

This may be so.

But although we do not desire to blind ourselves with wishful thinking, there are one or two points that have to be explained before we can completely accept the notion that the United States will be confined to an exclusively productive part in the struggle.

In the first place, there was the presence at the conference of the ranking fighting men of the United States, the war technicians, the leading generals and the top admirals.

If the purpose of the conference was to assign to the United States the task of producing war materials only, why was it necessary to bring into the discussion all those men whose sole business is to control the fighting machine of the United States?

What have the admirals of the American fleets and the chief of American naval operations got to do with the greater production of tanks, bombers and foodstuffs?

What have the top-rank generals of the United States army got to do with the safe convoy of American supplies to Britain?

The presence of these men would seem to indicate the discussion of a closely co-ordinated military and naval plan in which the forces of the United States are to play an important part.

Naturally, the more important details of this historic conference will not be made public. But it is a safe and fair guess that the implementation of the decisions made there will afford almost as many surprises to the people of this continent as it will to the rulers of Nazi Germany.

Weygand The Enigma

There is much that does not meet the eye in the new Vichy French alignment with Nazi Germany.

And chief of these hidden uncertainties is General Weygand.

Weygand was an enigma very early in the constitution of the illegal Vichy administration.

He skipped off to North Africa and region. Commoned back to Vichy, he reorganized the French armies in that refused to return. Even when a special plane was sent to fetch him, he declined to obey Petain's summons.

For several months, he permitted it to be believed that he was opposed to the Vichy regime and that a break in principle, if not in fact, had occurred between himself and Petain.

It was even thought, for awhile, that he was co-operating secretly with General Charles de Gaulle, Free French leader.

Then came evidence that he was not favorable to de Gaulle. It was reported that he had sold a good deal of French North African military equipment. It was assumed that these sales had been made to the Germans.

Weygand returned to Vichy shortly before Petain announced his second surrender to Hitler. But his role there was productive of an even greater mystery.

There were rumors of violent quarrels between himself and Darlan. It is certain that he dashed back to his African command in a desperate huff presumably before the final decisions were made in Vichy to move holus-bolus into the Nazi camp.

Whether these disagreements were caused by personal jealousy aroused by Darlan being placed over him or whether they arose from a disinclination to have any part in a plan that involved collaboration with the Nazis, no one appears to know.

It is a certainty, however, that Weygand has a vital part to play in French politics in the immediate future.

It plainly rests with him whether or not Darlan will be able to hand over important French African bases to Hitler. He can permit these transferences to work smoothly. Or he can prevent them by inciting revolt.

Weygand is in a position of vast significance. Upon his approval will depend the elaboration of Vichy treachery.

The Isolationist Attitude

Former Governor Alf Landon who, as some may remember, once ran against Franklin D. Roosevelt for the presidency of the United States and who lately has constituted himself a piping isolationist spokesman, is pleased to approve of the arrangement made between Churchill and Roosevelt.

He graciously admits that the two statesmen have outlined the kind of world in which most Americans would like to live.

But the former presidential candidate bumbles his approval by adding:

"However, I think most Americans will be interested in knowing what commitments, if any, were made by the President for the United States to help bring about this new world."

Evidently Mr. Landon, like all his fellow isolationists, wants peace at cut rates. A new world would be a fine thing to have, he infers, if somebody else will pay for it.

This bargain-counter attitude is typical, of course, of the isolationist mind.

They are all for freedom if they don't have to sacrifice anything for it. They are strong proponents of a democratic world provided the United States is not cajoled into making any commitments to bring that world about.

In this year 1941, the old belief in something for nothing appears to survive in only two kinds of people, the Nazis of Europe and Asia and the isolationists of the United States of America.

Hamstringing Japan

Typical of the firmer British attitude towards the threatening antics of Japan is the announcement that, effective today, London is banning all exports to Japan except under license.

This step plainly indicates two things:

1. That Britain and the United States have come to a common decision to waste no more time in the appeasement and conciliation of the Japanese warmongers.

2. That the British believe Japanese threats to Thailand and Siberia are rapidly approaching the point of action.

There is no doubt that Japan has been preparing for aggression in the firm conviction that neither the United States nor Great Britain would precipitate war in the Pacific by dealing too harshly with Japanese insolence and greed.

And while it is true that the application of economic sanctions is a long way from military resistance, this British gesture will surely indicate to Tokyo that the democratic allies are not bluffing, as many Japanese had obviously hoped and believed.

The Japanese people are plainly not united in the proposal to take on new opponents.

At the very least, then, this economic hamstringing of Japan, will tend to create internal diversions and dissensions in a country which seems to be taking an unconscionable time about making up its mind to strike.

British Offensive Forecast

New British-American Understanding May Prelude More Active Phase in War

By HAROLD L. WEIR

It is all very well for Berlin to ridicule and for Rome to sneer at the results of the mid-seas conference between Winston Churchill and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

All this anxious Axis despreciation only has the effect, if their stupid propagandists only knew it, of confirming our suspicions that the meeting of our leaders has them badly worried.

No one knows better than the Nazis the value of efficiency.

It is upon efficiency and economy of effort that their greatest successes have depended.

We have learned recently something about the intensive training of German army officers; how the most promising of them have to take special training in the navy, in the air force and in mechanized divisions; and how every general officer has to be intimately familiar with the operations of every branch of the service.

Harold L. Weir

We have learned, too, of the rigid instruction given every German soldier.

All the German victories have demonstrated the triumph of efficiency, and that a poor lot of men, if properly trained and disciplined, can beat a good lot of men who have been trained not so efficiently.

This, then, is the source of Axis worry over the meeting between Churchill and Roosevelt; that it preludes a higher standard of efficiency in the organization of the English-speaking world to destroy Nazi power.

The Germans know what efficiency can do. And they know that a truly efficient British-American war effort is an irresistible force.

That the British and Americans mean business in their resolution to promote belligerent efficiency in the war arrival in the United States of Lord Beaverbrook, dynamic minister of supply, almost at the same time as the announcement of the historic conference was made.

Beaverbrook lost no time, after arriving in Washington, in conferring with his opposite number William S. Knudsen and in telling reporters that Britain has the trained personnel, but not the tanks, to undertake large-scale operations against Germany and needs in large quantities more tanks, more bombers and more food.

After putting British aircraft production into a satisfactory condition, Lord Beaverbrook is now devoting his main energies to tank production and his mission in Washington is centred on getting American factories turning out tanks in volume comparable to the production now being achieved by the American aircraft industry.

It is possible, although not probable, that Beaverbrook himself will take over direction of the United States supply organization on a temporary basis until the urgent problems now has come to America on both sides are settled.

It is significan that one New York newspaper has actually suggested that the minister should be persuaded to stay here to help do for America's factory front what he did for British aircraft production."

This suggestion, however, may have a more mischievous than constructive intent.

More Positive Action

The Germans fear the efficiency implied in the understanding established between Brigain and America.

There is the implication that terrifies them still more. And that is the inescapable conclusion that all this speeded up effort points directly to an invasion of Germany.

The drive on tank production indicates more positive action. For while tanks are necessary for defence, the tank is primarily an offensive weapon.

The meeting between Churchill and Roosevelt has proved positive that the allies are no longer content with a defensive role.

The presence of Lord Beaverbrook in Washington shows that they are taking active steps to graduate out of that defensive role.

Thus, the war seems to be moving rapidly into a new phase, a phase that includes the carrying of the war into enemy territory.

This is a step the Germans have always dreaded and which they now see approaching closer and closer to reality.

Peace Offensive

But if the allies are preparing to take the offensive in a military way, they are also preparing to take the offensive in a moral way.

There was deep significance, for instance, in the enunciation of a peace program by the two great leaders of democracy.

Hitherto, all peace proposals have issued in a roundabout and indirect way, in the form of rumors and kite-flying, from Berlin.

Hitler, it is well known, has set many of these peace feelers afloat.

The formulation of a basis for peace, then, as it came out of the Atlantic conference, is a forthright but no less positive rejection of all these vague and specious offers.

Britain and America, it was made very plain, will acknowledge only one kind of peace. And that is a peace based, not on Hitler's proposals, but on the democratic ideal.

There is no doubt that Hitler intended to offer a peace of the terms of Brest immediately after the close of the Russian campaign. Now he finds his offers spurned before they are made.

He finds himself in the position of losing the military initiative and of having lost the peace initiative.

Britain and America now are on the offensive from every standpoint.

The character of the war is about to change.

La France De 1940

PART IV.—SUITE ET FIN.

(Conférence faite à Brassaville par le Commandant G. . . qui tout dernièrement se trouvait à Vichy.)

J'ai parlé des Français; mais je dois un hommage spécial aux Françaises. Les femmes de France, en zone occupée ou non occupée, sont les gardiennes de la flamme. Elles gardent pas la flamme des âtres, les réséghes, les mous. Elles méprisent ceux qui capitulent et admirent ceux qui se battent. Elles sont insensibles aux raisonnements ingénieux des laquais de l'ennemi. Elles ne peuvent admettre que leurs pères, leurs maris, leurs frères, leurs fils aient été tués ou faits prisonniers à la faute de Mr. Churchill et non par suite des atientats répétés de Mussolini et Hitler contre les peuples libres et pacifiques.

C'est pourquoi elles appuient de tout leur coeur la courageuse entreprise du Général de Gaulle.

L'instinct des Français ne les trompe pas. s'ils pouvaient lire les journaux d'Outre-Rhin, il leur serait facile de répondre aux sophismes des agents de la collaboration franco-allemande. On peut, en lisant ces journaux, se faire une idée de ce qui attend la France en cas de victoire allemande.

L'Alsace-Lorraine est déjà annexée au Reich, en violation des clauses de l'armistice. Le métropole perdra en outre les départements du Nord et du Pas-de-Calais, de la Meurthe-et-Moselle, des Vosges, de la Haute-Marne, de la Haute-Saône, du Doubs et du Jura.

L'Italie aura la Savoie, Nice, la Corse. Les ports de la Manche, laissés à la France, recevront une occupation allemande, pour prévenir une invasion anglaise.

La France deviendra un pays presque exclusivement agricole. Elle perdra le droit d'entretenir ni industrie lourde, ni usines d'armements.

Quant aux colonies, la France les perdra toutes. Il y a pour cela trois excellentes raisons: premièrement, la France est signataire du traité de Versailles, qui a enlevé à l'Allemagne la totalité de ses possessions d'outre-mer; deuxièmement, la France est un pays vieilli, usé, pourri, et seuls, les peuples jeunes et prolifiques ont le droit de coloniser; troisièmement, il importe de mettre fin à la honte que constitue, pour le monde civilisé, l'empire noire français.

Cette même presse allemande qui tourne en dérision le gouvernement Pétain, proclame que le Reich ne trouve pas à tant de servilité de la part du vaincu. Mais elle reconnaît dans le Général de Gaulle "le type du vrai Français patriote."

La presse allemande est encore plus virulente que la presse allemande: "La France, dit M. Virginio Gayda, aura la paix qu'elle mérite. Il y a longtemps que la France est battue. La France est finie."

Voilà ce que nous promet la fameuse collaboration avec Vichy. C'est la collaboration du beefsteak et du consommateur.

En attendant cette heureuse époque, l'Allemagne met la France au pillage. Elle réquisitionne avec des "marks d'occupation," absolument sans valeur, ou elle vole purement et simplement.

Tout y passe: stocks industriels, produits alimentaires, matières premières, draps, couvertures, matelas, vaisselle, meubles, bicyclettes.

Elle tente de germaniser l'Alsace-Lorraine, en expulsant une partie de la population, en proscrivant la langue française, en faisant disparaître tout ce qui rappelle la France, jusqu'aux statues de Jeanne d'Arc.

Elle détruit le monument Mangin à Paris, le monument de l'armée noire à Reims . . . Mais elle ne détruira pas l'âme française.

Et vous, Français Libres, vous ne décevrez pas la confiance qu'ont en vous les Français de la Métropole. Vous serez de nos Alliés puissants et résolus, vous continuerez la lutte jusqu'à la victoire.

New And Old

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN

Some British cities have so energetically organized the collection of waste paper that they have a shortage for fresh pulp and salvage new. The citizens are ordered to throw out their unwanted books.

Many whom the war has forced to move house have groaned before the accumulation of their shelves. Even despite the borrowers, those in the habit of buying books find themselves easily oppressed with numbers. Even pocket-handkerchiefs are usually trifling; here at least is a chance to get the unwanted patriotically off the premises and so to be rid gratis of that which was only consuming space and amassing dust.

Here, too, is the raw material for the new books which will keep the publishers' trade from complete war-time stagnancy and give authorship its chance to continue.

Pilgrims Back To Plymouth

Text of a Speech Given at British Seaport by United States Columnist

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

PLYMOUTH, England.—(By Wireless)—It seems a shame to interrupt your dancing here in the open air above the sea, for the twilight is passing and soon the blackout will come and we must all disperse. It seems better that you dance, as you do evening after evening, than that you listen to speeches.

Dorothy Thompson

But when I have gone away and think back on this day I will think of the city where, when it was levelled to the ground, the people—young and old—came out upon this lovely Hoe overlooking the harbor and each day at dusk listened to music and danced together.

When I had walked where the streets once were and stood where homes once were and had seen the tangled, rusted heaps of steel where factories and shops once were—when I saw St. Andrews' violated walls, I asked whether anything still stood untouched in Plymouth. I was brought here to see the Mayflower steps and the Mayflower monument, which destruction did not touch.

Band of Pilgrims

From these steps 300 years ago a band of Pilgrims set out for the new world. You have commemorated their going with a modest monument and bronze inscription. And over there across the ocean is another Plymouth with another inscription upon a rock. That inscription says something like this: "This rock marks the first landing place of the Pilgrims of the Mayflower. In hunger and cold, battling Indians and the wilderness and burying their dead in common graves lest the Indians should know how many had perished, they here laid the foundations of a state in which through countless ages men should have liberty and freedom in their worship of God."

The rock admonishes all who pass to remember the Pilgrims and not rest "until liberty is established throughout the earth."

Now you, too, have battled savagery and in the wilderness of rock and rubble that your city has become, you, too, have buried unexpected dead. But you, too, are building out of ashes a world in which through countless ages men shall have liberty.

Between the Mayflower steps and Plymouth rock there was once a sea that only the adventurous dared cross. Today a tunnel spanned by planes in a few hours separates the steps from the rock, and behind the rock lies a continent, and the Pilgrim band has grown into 130,000,000 people who live in liberty.

The wilderness did not stifle the Pilgrims, and the grass that grew over their graves did not inhibit out their memory. In the generations that passed men came to join them from all the nations of Europe as today from all nations of Europe come to join you.

New Pilgrim Fathers

Daily, French fishermen, jealous for liberty, slide into your ports under German guns to join the fighting forces of a land of free men. Some come to England and carry not only guns and food, but Dutchmen, Poles, Norwegians and Czechs who are the Pilgrim Fathers of today. They come to fight from here for states in which through countless ages men shall know liberty.

I, too, come as a Pilgrim returning to the steps from the rock. I come to say that ships and planes are the only bridge between here and there. The strongest bridge is invisible. It is built of hopes blasted and prayers, of dreams forgotten, and the returning of bodies buried, but remembered—of heroes for whom the bell always tolls.

Drake's St. Andrews is blasted, but its bell still rings. It rang in the victors of the Armada and will ring in the victors again—for those who fight with the whole world of free men on their side will come home at last in triumph.

Then we will stand together from the steps and from the rock the world that is always unfinished—a world in which there is work for all and a task for each for all of us, and freedom for all of us. We must build a new Plymouth here above the sea, a city of new churches and new shops and homes as a monument to the steps and the rock—to the dream of the countless ages, to the cry for liberty that has been heard and that has been granted.

Battle For Silk Stockings

Hoarding Unavailing Because Color Styles Are Slated To Undergo Change

By HENRY McLEMORE

WASHINGTON—One of the most under-handed tricks that has been worked in this country since Benedict Arnold was doing his stuff during the revolution is being practised at this moment.

The victim of treachery was revealed in a statement by President Alexander McKeown of the C.I.O. American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

H. McLemore

"Advance fall and winter styles show stockings of many colors. Greens, with solid color hose much the vogue," Mc-Keown said. "Green, browns, and some vivid shades will be the thing. Women hoarders of silk stockings are buying beiges that will be as out of date as yesterday's newspapers."

If McKeown has known all along that this was what was going to happen, he pulled a pretty mean trick on the conscientious, hard-working, stocking-hoarding gals of this country, and if he doesn't, I feel they have gone out and risked their well-being in a desperate effort to get hold of as many pairs of stockings as they could lay their pretty hands on.

No one who has witnessed or participated in a recent department store stocking rush can help but feel sorry for those involved. Our brave lassies endured more hardships than any draftee has since he was inducted into the army. Even though the Tennessee army manoeuvres and they were child's play compared to the pitched battles that have been going on around stocking counters.

Real Warfare

The Tennessee stuff was mock warfare. The girls put on the real thing. They elbowed, they scratched, they kicked, they stepped on one another's feet. They placed elbows firmly in one another's eyes and trampled one another mercilessly.

It is to be hoped that the War Department was smart enough to place military observers near the stocking counters. The women used every type of modern warfare to reach a striking position at the beige, suntans, and the naturals. Big women simulated tanks and tore great gaps in the ranks of the lighter girls in front of them. Small, mobile units of women worked flank movements on the salesgirls, and struck from behind to gain their objective. Many a woman had a pincer movement put on her as she was about to buy the last two pairs of stockings available in her size.

The morale of the stocking army was magnificent.

There were no cowards anywhere.

There were no conscripts, either every woman was a willing volunteer.

Their grim determination to buy or die was stirring.

Now it would seem that because of the foxy Mr. McKeown this splendid achievement in hoarding silk stockings must be in vain. Somehow it just doesn't seem right that this great, concerted, unpatriotic effort by our American women should have to go by the boards.

Of No Avail

I am going to do my best to keep the news of the red, the green, and the other vivid shades of hose that will be worn this fall from my wife. She still is under a physician's care from the banging around she got buying six pairs of beige two-thread, and frankly I don't believe she is up to standing the shock of learning that her frantic hoarding will be to no avail.

Those six pairs of stockings have become her most treasured possessions. Even in her weakened condition she insists each day in making the rounds to where she has them hidden to see if they are any signs of disintegration. She has one pair sealed in a fruit jar (some one told her that air would break down their delicate constitutions). There is another pair in a humidor from which she poured all my tobacco, and the other four pairs are wrapped in yards of cellophane.

This is just one example of what hoarded silk stockings mean to the women of this country, and I foresee a near revolution when they all realize that McKeown has double-crossed them. Of course, Mr. McKeown isn't going to get off scot free after his treachery—that is, if there is a Mrs. McKeown.

New Plastics

KITCHENER RECORD

Surplus coffee now burned in Brazil at an annual loss of $1,400,000 is to be made into plastics material, says Food Industries. Already a pilot plant is partially completed, which will produce 18,000 pounds of plastics daily from 215 bags of coffee. And soon work will start on a $5,000,000 plant to make 500,000,000 pounds of plastics annually, which would make Brazil the world's principal producer of plastics powder. Perhaps somewhere in that field lies a partial solution to Canada's surplus wheat problem.

Real Reason

MINNEAPOLIS STAR JOURNAL

The real reason 10 Japanese ships were barred from the Panama Canal was the discovery that two of their ships were floating bazaars, being rushed to the east coast of South America to ward off the trade which Axis operators were forced to abandon as a result of the U.S. blacklist.

Apparently the day we had a tip that the blacklist was going to be issued, because the two ships hastily left the west coast and were waiting to go through the canal, when suddenly the blacklist was published.

Equipped with elaborate merchandising displays, and carrying high-powered, Spanish-speaking salesmen, the ships were literal arsenals of economic warfare.

With them the Japanese would have invaded lucrative markets in Latin America before either the U.S. or the Latin Americans could have blocked them.

The world is learning tolerance as never before. It is beginning to see that there is a need on earth for every race. —Henry Ford, in interview on his 78th birthday.

Major And Minor Notes

By John Oliver

ALBERTA'S 33th annual music festival will be held at Calgary from Monday, May 11 to Saturday, May 16, 1942 and in order to give those contemplating competing, every opportunity to prepare, the 36th, annual festival is scheduled for Lethbridge from Monday, May 24, to Saturday, May 29, 1943. The 1942 date was approved and the 1943 date "tentatively approved" at the 16th annual conference of delegates from the music competition festivals of Canada, held recently at the Bessborough hotel, Saskatoon.

JOHN OLIVER

The festival was held here this year and it has been the practice in recent times to hold it successively in the three largest cities of the province. With the dates of next year's event now set and with the syllabus likely to be available in the near future, intending competitors in the various events can get down to early preparation. This is advisable, as, due to war conditions, obtaining of music is sometimes difficult and no opportunity should be lost to set off to an early start.

Appointment of 1942 adjudicators has not yet been made. The difficulties regarding exit permits from the British Isles and the uncertainty of transportation make it somewhat risky to rely on any arrangement with those in the Old Country while the war is on. It was pointed out that as necessity of the adjudicators doing all the festivals in a chain, did not arise to the same extent as when the cost of and time taken up in ocean travel came into the calculations. It was further suggested some separate and independent arrangements might be made with adjudicators on this continent. In the net result it was agreed "That the executive of the Manitoba festival be granted authority to appoint British adjudicators, or alternatives, for the Canadian festivals, as scheduled, notice of such appointments being forwarded to the festivals concerned."

The conference resolved that it thanks "Be accorded to Sir Hugh Roberton, George Dodds and Maurice Jacobson, for the watchful disinterested services they have rendered to the festival movement in Canada and that their re-appointment as British representatives of the Canadian festival be confirmed."

The question of the relationship of music teachers to the festival movement was discussed. Suggestion was made by a Regina delegate that some sort of liaison should be established between them. He pointed out that for years "teachers tended to lean on the festival as the best stimulus to their profession" and that there was not much organization then among the teachers, but "lately a local association had been formed which was showing considerable life and the teachers were apparently thinking less about the festival than formerly."

It was stated that the festival had the co-operation of Alberta teachers and to them was allotted the responsibility of selecting the test pieces while they glady left the management otherwise in the hands of non-professional citizens. A Manitoba delegate declared he supposed that in every city there were teachers who did little or nothing to help or even recognize the festival or who only entered their best pupils. They left it to others to provide the competitors, the material on which the adjudicators built their cumulative remarks.

He further declared, that these same teachers took full advantage of those remarks. This, he contended, was a narrow, selfish and shortsighted attitude. Looking at it from a purely material point of view, a matter of dollars and cents, he believed that there was not a teacher in any city in which a festival was functioning, but whose receipts from tuition were greater than they would be if there was no festival. He would suggest that it should be pointed out to all teachers, whether through the medium of an association or not, that if the festival is of value to their profession, they should send in their pupils, that if they consider it of little or no value they should publicly say so and allow those business men who unselfishly have been carrying on the festival to give it up and devote their energies to some other form of public spirited enterprise. He ventured the opinion that the mere suggestion of discontinuance would bring sharply home to many people what the festival really means to the community.

The University of Alberta Philharmonic Society will produce Gilbert and Sullivan's Pirates of Penzance, as its regular production at Convocation Hall during the coming academic year. Production will take place in the last week of January and the following week the full company, as has been the custom in the last few years, will proceed to Calgary, for repeat performances. Ernest Shortliffe, president of the organization and Robert Torrance, business manager, already are busily engaged on preliminary details.

Walter Holowach who acted as musical director for The Mikado last winter, will fill a similar role this year, Thomas W. Dalkin, who has acted as producer for the last several years will again be on hand in this capacity and G. A. Kevan again will train the chorus. Vocal scores have been distributed to tentative members of the cast and rehearsals will commence soon after the academic year opens. Prior to conducting The Mikado last year—his debut on the podium for a major presentation—Mr. Holowach was concertmaster of the University orchestra. After early violin study here, he completed his student days in pre-Hitler Vienna.

In selecting The Pirates of Penzance the University Philharmonic has picked on one of the most humorous and melodious of all the Gilbert and Sullivan collaborations. It will be a repeat production for the University, as it was presented five years ago. The Mikado last winter also was a repeat, it being the first Gilbert and Sullivan operetta undertaken by this organization.

In chronological order, The Pirates followed H.M.S. Pinafore. The latter was the tremendous success and Gilbert, Sullivan and D'Oyly Carte, the producer, all crossed the Atlantic to counteract the plots of the pirates guilty of privateering the "Pinafore" and who were ready, if preventive measures were not taken, to sieze, in the same flagrant manner, the next work produced by the Savoy masters. With a view to protecting their interests by securing American copyright, the new opera which they had written for their next London season was produced in New York. This was The Pirates of Penzance or the Slave to Duty. A simultaneous production of the piece was given in England, on December 31, 1879 at the Bijou theatre, Paignton, Devon. This secured the copyright in both Britain and the U.S.

The performance at Paignton was witnessed by not more than 50 persons, so, on Saturday, April 3, 1880, when it was produced at the Opera Comique, London, it came as a new opera. Although The Pirates followed Trial by Jury, The Sorcerer and Pinafore, it was acclaimed as the best work of the collaborators to date and the reception, apparently, was more spontaneous.

Of Sullivan's music, one critic wrote: "Mr. Sullivan has carried out more completely than ever, his original and fanciful idea of caricaturing grand opera. The result is that we have music worthy in its artistic qualities to rank with some of the best efforts of our greatest composers, while it has a piquant freshness and buoyancy such as no other modern musician has equalled. Our English Auber has given us melodies as novel in rhythm as the French composer, while there is a geniality in them more welcome even than the glitter and crisp accent of the Gallic school. Many of the musical numbers are absolutely perfect examples of what such music should be."

In the score are such gems as Poor Wandering One, I Am the Very Pattern of a Modern Major-General, O Leave Me Not to Pine Alone and Desolate, and of course the famous Policemen's Chorus. There will be many fine opportunities for effect in the staging, in the chorus singing, and the whole will present the University organization with a chance to rise to great heights.

Newspaper Use In Teaching Is Urged

GENEVA PARK, Lake Couchiching, Ont., Aug. 16. — (CP)—Greater interest by secondary school students in civic, provincial and dominion politics and changes in the methods of rural school education were advocated last night by speakers at the opening meeting of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation committee on the teaching of democratic citizenship.

Mrs. H. P. Plumptre of Toronto spoke of the need for studying civic politics in the secondary schools. "The newspapers give you the news and I think one part of a teacher's duties should be to teach use of the newspapers as a source of current events."

Important Salvage Speeds War Effort

Typical of the important part played by everyone, even small children, in Canada's national salvage effort, is the contribution of little Anita and Victor Salisbey. These young Canadians—of Syrian descent —are shown here at a scrap iron depot with their play wagon loaded down with materials.

OTTAWA. — (Special) — Do you know what happens when you donate a piece of scrap iron or steel to Canada's war effort? Do you realize the extent of your contribution?

"It is much greater than most Canadians think," declared William Knightley, supervisor, Canada's National Salvage campaign, in an interview today. "To turn in an obsolete machine, or even so small a thing as a couple of broken monkey wrenches, is to help Canada save time, labor, money and the building of tanks, guns, bombs, armor plate for ships, hand grenades, and all the other devices of war made from steel and iron."

Mr. Knightley went on to explain some of the technicalities of Canada's heavy-industry war production.

Steel, he pointed out, may be made from iron ore, or from a mixture of iron ore and scrap metal. The more scrap metal used, the greater the output of a smelter. A smelter turning out 10,000 tons of steel a week using iron ore alone can increase its output to 25,000 tons a week using iron ore and scrap.

"The hundreds of thousands of tons of scrap iron and steel, so far collected by Canada's National Salvage drive and turned over to industry, have helped materially to maintain the large flow of this essential material for war production.

Mr. Knightley also pointed out how the collection of scrap metal from Canadian homes, garages, basements, workshops has saved labor.

"If we had had to depend entirely upon Canadian iron ore for our steel production," he said, "we would have had to greatly increase the output from our few ore mines. This would have needed more skilled miners. They have not been available in any large numbers, and it would have been necessary to transfer them from other industries."

Canada's National Salvage campaign has helped to conserve this labor, and to prevent dislocations attending large transfers of labor.

"Nor is this the end of the contribution," added the supervisor. "Last year Canada imported $13,000,000 worth of scrap iron and steel. This used foreign exchange. Additional exchange was required for the purchase of vast quantities of iron ore. The National Salvage campaign, by collecting scrap metal, helps to keep this expenditure of precious foreign exchange to a minimum."

These are the things the average Canadian does when he "saves scrap to scrap Hitler," concluded Mr. Knightley. To donate a quantity of metal really saves time, labor, and money. It helps directly to build tanks, ships, bombs, and other implements of war.

In eastern Canada, the supervisor said, the collection of steel and iron salvage goes forward apace. In western Canada, the problem of markets and transportation is still under consideration.

"All Out" Effort By City Students Urged

By KAY WINNIFRED BIGLAND

Here we are, with vacation time more than half over! School has been out for well over a month, and even longer than that for we students who did not have to write departmental exams. Have we been using our time to good advantage? Let's look at ourselves and see. Some of us got jobs as soon as we were through school. Others decided to have a bit of a breather, and then get a job a little later on—perhaps. Some of us considered and deliberated, picked and chose, classing some jobs in the "too hard for me to do" ones, some of them in the "I don't like that kind of work" group and still others in the "not good enough for me" kind. How many of us jumped right in and took whatever we could get, no matter what it was? Quite a few? Good, we're not such a bad bunch after all.

Getting jobs and working for a salary, no matter how small, is good for young people. We are fair minded kids, and we know that it isn't right that when so many people are suffering so tragically, we should have nothing to do from school closing time in June until commencement in September. We know of the horrors of war, and that is where our main object in getting jobs comes in—we want to help. We'll spend our money in helping towards a glorious victory for our side!

MANY ENLISTING

Those of us who are eligible for the armed forces are joining. A lot of boys joined up as soon as school was out, some of them not even waiting to graduate, so impatient were they to get into the thick of it.

Boys who are joining up aren't doing so because of the glamor of a uniform or the inspiration of martial music. They know what they are going into, and are doing it in a level headed manner. They know that their country's freedom is at stake, and they know that the country that gave Canada its life is suffering inhumanly from the crazy tortures of a maddened nation.

All of us can't join the army, the navy or the air force, but we can still do work that is just as important. Labor is getting more scarce and it is time that we stepped in to fill the gap, if we haven't already done so. Even though by working long hard hours, we earn only a little, that little will mean so much if we spend it in a way worthy of true Canadians—by giving it to some war aiding institution.

RESPONSIBILITY

There's another thing too. By being ready and willing to undertake the responsibility of a job, we will be releasing men for active service. Women are eligible for work that we cannot do.

We haven't much time left before school starts, but there isn't any good reason why most of us can't do our shares even after school does start, is there? Our studies don't take up all of our time.

Maybe if we plead hard enough, and present a good enough argument, we can get our teachers to deal out the homework a little more leniently, to allow us time to do war work. There are so many ways in which we can help that not one of us has an excuse for sitting down on the job.

So let's all get to work, if we aren't already on the jump! Let's outline our work so that each day we will do a little more than we did the day before. Then, when this big fight is over, we can stand and survey our country and know in our hearts that we have done our parts in preserving democracy.

News Notes Of Alberta Young People

A Page Devoted To Youth . . . Featured Every Saturday

I.Y.P.B. Annual Camp Scheduled For Late August

Tenth annual camp of the Interdenominational Young People will be held August 30 and 31, and September 1, at Moonlight Bay, near Kapasiwin, it was announced Saturday.

Nestled among trees, and looking out on a bay on Lake Wabamun, the camp site is an ideal spot for the annual gathering. Comforiable cabins and tents provide accommodation for over 80 young people.

One of the purposes of the Interdenominational Young People's Board is to encourage a spirit of cooperation among the young people of the churches of Edmonton. These camps have furthered this purpose with great success.

Young people of every denomination find fellowship in sports, discussions, campfires and singsongs. The committee in charge, headed by Joe Trickey, promises an interesting and varied program. The theme this year is "Advancing Youth". Competent leaders will guide discussions on topics relating to this theme.

Anyone wishing to assure himself of a place at camp may obtain information from the registrar, Edith McClure, 9640 110 avenue, by phoning 27014.

Children Of Garneau Hold Benefit Show

Aiding war work in Canada and overseas is nothing new to an energetic group of children in the Garneau district, who this week staged their second annual carnival.

This year, proceeds will be devoted to the Churchill fund. Last year the children raised $30 during their first carnival.

Objective of the carnival was reached Friday night, when the children had collected $50 from their two-day effort. A raffle of a large portrait of Winston Churchill, donated by an art shop, was held Friday night.

Ranging in age from 3 to 13, the youngsters held their gala carnival on Thursday and Friday, in a vacant lot near 111A1 84 avenue, and provided side-shows, fortune-telling, games of chance, and many other attractions. Each evening a platform show was given by the children who acted as performers, masters of ceremony and ushers.

The children were Clyde Higgins, Douglas Werner, Richard and Marjorie Ann Barker, Victor McCosham, Robert Cook, Allan and Mary Colling, Doris Hazlett, Archie Smith, Rodney Wenzel, Darrel Mills, Kay Seller, Peggy Duncan, Audrey Broder and Hank Luck.

Prizes given by the children were ice-cream and candy, and admissions were five cents.

Youngsters and oldsters attended the big carnival staged by the little group, and thoroughly enjoyed themselves during the two-day carnival.

Travel Letter Shows Glamor Of Far East

One of the most interesting travel letters received by the editor of this page, recently, deals with travel and life in the Far East. Descriptive of the atmosphere and mood of the eastern countries, the letter claims particular attention because of the part of the world.

The letter reads, in part, as follows:

"En route to Bombay, India, we visited in Honolulu, Japan, Manila, Singapore and the Malay States. We had a perfect and beautiful day in Honolulu. The island is like one's dream of the tropics (many places in the tropics are not) and we saw the almost unbelievable turquoise blue of the ocean around Hawaii.

SINGAPORE

"During a week's visit in Manila in the Philippine Islands we were much interested in wandering about the old Walled City, which still retains much of the flavor of old Spain. Singapore, where we docked later, was a busy centre. Our ship carried a great deal of freight and loading or unloading went on continually, the whole time we were in port. The noise of the winches, the yelling of the laborers and the intense heat made the nights almost unbearable and it was the same in Penang, an island port at the north-west corner of the Malay States, and again in Colombo, port of Ceylon.

"In spite of all the interesting things we were seeing in our first glimpses of the Orient, it was a great relief when we arrived in Bombay in mid-March, and could look forward to settling down on land after two months of living in a ship cabin.

"In India running a home is not a simple matter. The servant problem is a trial for iron-bound rules of caste make it necessary to have at least three men-servants, a cook, a hamal (a cleaning boy for housework) and a butler. These men are needed in the simplest home, and no woman servants are seen in Bombay.

"Driving in Bombay is a hazardous business, too nerve-racking to enjoy, what with streets swarming with coolies, sacred cows, bicycles, horse-drawn victorias, pedestrians and beggars, besides the regular motor traffic which is heavy. No one keeps to the sidewalks and the downton streets are always full of people, too.

NATIVE BAZAARS

"Of the many odd sights to be seen the native bazaars are especially fascinating—little holes in the wall raised just a step above street-level and open to the road, so that you may buy from the sidewalk from the proprietor sitting cross-legged on a pillow. Fine silks, satins, brass and delicate silver work, carved ivories and Kashmir woods, hand embroideries, hand-blocked cotton prints are among things offered, and it is a splendid place to buy jewels.

"We have had a few short trips on the mainland and once we took a sailboat ride to Elephanta, an island in Bombay harbor where are many old Hindu temples in caves.

"Here some of their Hindu deities were smashed long ago during the Portuguese invasion but many are quite complete.

"It is interesting just to sit on our porch and look out into the garden when there is always some unusual bird or flower to see—green shy wild parrots, bulbuls, mina birds, flashing wild canaries. Once in a while a big gray monkey strays in. I have never seen such lovely flowers—hibiscus, gardenias, frangipani, flame of the forest, magnolias and bougainvillea and other tropical flowers and vines."

"The Battle Of The Air Waves"

In St. Louis, in Sasebo and beneath the Southern Cross
You can hear Berlin come rolling in, raw, guttural and gross;
And they spread their propaganda like a fire on the plains
When the grass is long, brown and dry, from a summer without rains;
And the panic of small neutrals like a blustery evening breeze
Fans, with their cringing falsehood rumors, this "Hitler Fear Disease."

But everywhere the Germans go the British sparks crash through,
For the BBC and Rugby, working crystal-cut and true,
Send the voice of George or Winnie to an Empire day by day
From the bomb-razed heart of England in the middle of the fray
"Conservatively estimated" news reports they send
Not as bragging dictates, but just as friend to friend.

On the ever widening air waves, with traffic lanes galore,
The stakes are high, and in the sky each nation needs must score.
There Uncle Sam's reporters spread, throughout the world today,
The facts as they can see them, via Radio MacKay.
And there the Japanese with their diplomatic hordes
Add to the world confusion with their vaguely threatening words.

Yet there echoes and re-echoes in the hearts and minds of men,
That the truth will come, when we have won the right to live again;
For the British style of justice and the democratic home
Are the kind that all free nations see reflected in their own.
And the madmen build their temples to a modern dizzy height,
The same God rules the universe as smote proud Babylon's might.

While across the North Atlantic where our convoys span the sea—
Taking food and hope to those who grope in blacked-out misery—
Dots and dashes bear the orders and they warn our every ship
Of the subsurface lurking in hiding on the hazard-laden trip.
Our destroyers read the warnings and they hasten on the trail,
And the Germans are in mourning, for our lifelines will not fail

So the Battle of the Air Waves goes raging ever on and on.
And though Berlin comes rolling in, they'll change their tune anon;
For the BBC and Rugby work on, crystal-cut and clear,
And the race who built an Empire, is a people without fear.
And we hope the Nations heed not boastful terrior traffic hurld—
For we fight till "Peace and Freedom" is our message to the world.

"Believe It Or Not" Bob Ripley Has Things To Learn From Chinese

Optometrists are used to unusual requests, but Bob "Believe It Or Not" Ripley did manage to surprise an optometrist and a gentleman who makes glass eyes recently, when he requested some eyes for Confucius! Seems the famous cartoonist had recently been appointed honorary chairman of the Mamaroneck, N.Y., committee for China Relief, and was planning to entertain them at his town house, which is decorated with valuable curios and treasures which he had brought back from his travels in China. Therefore, he figured, it would make a perfect setting for the Chinese dinner he planned to have served, and the Chinese music and entertainment which was to follow. Among his guests were Carl Crow, famed author, and authority on China, who had lived there 26 years; Miss Lee Ya-Ching, the world's foremost Chinese aviatrix, who flew 10,000 miles on a tour to raise money for medical aid for her native land; Chinese Consul-General Chin Tsune-Chyu, and Vice Consul George Wu, son of the secretary to the commandant.

Ripley decided to make the occasion a special one by having eyes put in his new golden statue of Confucius. A hurry call was sent out to Optometrist Walter Lind of New York city, who, with Leon Morrell, maker of glass eyes, hurried to the Ripley home with a tray of eyes in all shapes, sizes and colors. They did come fast work, with the result that Confucius was complete to eyes, the night of the party.

Ripley found there is a special reason for leaving the statue uncompleted, as far as eyes are concerned.

The story is that when a Chinese idol is first carved, he is given his first bath, and the ceremony of opening his eyes is performed.

CEREMONY

The ceremony is as follows: Incense is lit and stuck in a bowl of uncooked rice. Eggs are, put into the bath water. Two eggs for a boy, and one egg for a girl.

Then a prayer is written on a piece of paper. The prayer reads "Lady of the light of the eye, rub the light of the eye with two magic salves, the luminous herb and the shining stone, and may the child live to see five generations in the same room."

Then the paper upon which the prayer has been written is ignited, and the ashes put in the water. As the child is bathed, the water with ashes in it is applied to the eyelids. (In recent years they haven't been putting it on a baby's eyes during this ceremony, as they figure it doesn't help the eyes any—but they still do it to statues.)

The same ceremony is performed when putting eyes into statues. This is always the last thing done, as the belief is that soon as the eyes are put in, the statue can see where it is going, and go away.

Since Confucius was a "teetotaler" it is not proper to drink in front of him when he can see you, so they bandage the eyes of the statue with an ordinary piece of gray cloth, when they serve Saki or any Chinese wine or liquor.

Their saying is "Fashion allee same—blissful unconcern." Which is probably where we got our saying "What you don't know won't hurt you."

Combined Camp Of Scout Troops At Lloydminster

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

LLOYDMINSTER, Aug. 16.—A combined camp composed of Scout troops from Maidstone, Lloydminster and Vermilion has just been completed at Long Lake near the Onion Lake Indian reserve. A very busy time was spent building all kinds of conveniences in preparation for a large Girl Guide camp which took over from the Scouts, such as various kinds of fires including rock and cement cooking fires, alter cooking and trapper fires, nessmuk heating fireplaces to mention just a few. A cooling cellar was dug and completed with lumber and rock steps, a landing platform at the lake, a raft and diving board were also added to the camp equipment.

Four Scout classes were held each morning which included instruction in camp craft, forestry, knotting, life saving, ambulance, signalling and first and second class work. The instructors were Scouters Mitchell of Maidstone, and Robert and Jenkins of Lloydminster. King Scout Speller took two classes. Scoutmaster Leversedge of Vermilion was a welcome addition to the leadership when he turned up for the last few days.

SOFTBALL LEAGUE

A very much alive softball league was organized, with each game full of surprises and enthusiasm, finishing with the Bulldogs of Maidstone as the final winners. Feeling was repeatedly expressed that plans should be considered for a permanent camp site with one or two buildings for the Scouts and Guides of this northern district. Property is being collected together, including a sail boat, yet transportation is proving increasingly difficult each year and the expenses. The increased expenses for the food supply this year was somewhat of a surprise, the cost this year being 65c per day per boy in contrast to 42 cents last year.

Thanks are due the Anglican Indian Mission and the Roman Catholic Indian Mission for kindly showing the boys through their interesting buildings, and additional thanks are due to the priests and sisters of the Roman Catholic Mission for inviting the whole camp over for an evening for a camp fire and kindly providing refreshments for the crowd. There was kindness shown to the boys everywhere, not only from the Indian agent and his wife, but also from the Indians and the white friends at Harlan. Everyone returned home healthy and strong with many happy memories for the coming long winter evenings.

August "Dog Days"

Too much exercise and over-exertion for dogs during the summer months doesn't do them any good, nor does overfeeding. If your pet seems to be panting too much, a little salt added to his drinking water will help. The water should be kept fresh but not cold. Some authorities claim that shaving and clipping dogs does not help them in the summer, and that the coat affords a certain protection for the body, which is usually thinned out by nature in the summer-time.

BAWLF, Aug. 16.—The Bawlf Luther League Young People gave another excellent program at the church Sunday evening. Conrad Gunderson was in charge of the program and those participating were: Clarence Rosdal, devotions; Misses Lily and Ella Loken, a duet; Miss Gladys Olson, a reading; Misses Esther Bergum and Helga Loken, a duet; Miss Eileen Rosdal, a reading; and T. E. Anderson gave the address.

The meeting closed with a number of hymns and benediction.

C.G.I.T. Meet

BREMNER, Aug. 16.—C.G.I.T. girls met with their leader, Miss Hazel Wilkinson, recently. The girls worked on place cards for the Mother and Daughter banquet to be held in the future. Next meeting will take the form of a hike, starting at Mr. F. R. McCalla's, to the mouth of Old Man Creek, and the girls will take their lunches and eat at McCalla's ravine on their return.

Looking them Over
By Kelly

IF the tang in the air these days hasn't made you get gun oil on your fingers, then you won't be particularly interested in what follows, but if a brisk walk sends you home to get out your shotgun and give it a polishing you'll be one of the boys this is intended for.

The July survey of western Canada by Kee-men of Ducks Unlimited indicates a bigger crop than for many years with the average annual loss of 30 per cent through lack of water—a condition aggravated greatly by the terrific blast of heat in July this year.

Northern and central Alberta is sitting pretty with every indication of myriads of ducks. A bumper crop is reported around the Athabaska delta and a "tremendous" crop of ducks in the Peace River country, to use the official wording of the Ducks Unlimited survey. The Edmonton area has a "good" duck supply while the east-central part of Alberta, over as far as the Saskatchewan boundary, is said to be loaded with ducks. Upland game birds are also reported plentiful in all sections.

The war has a way of disturbing everything from London to the ducks you hope to bag next month. Thousands of the more ardent Canadian sportsmen are already on active service and these were to a large extent the men who went out each spring and summer and blasted crows and magpies. These two winged curses are now on the increase again practically everywhere it, the west. One healthy crow or magpie will destroy more ducks in a season than 20 ordinary shooters.

Every time you see one of these pests, just remember that if it had never been hatched out in place in nature's haphazard scheme of things would be filled by enough ducks and upland game birds to give a score of hunters many days of fine sport.

Ponoka Must Win Or Pack

SUNDAY afternoon brings the big game of the Central Alberta Baseball League's season to date—Ponoka Stampeders against the Edmonton Dodgers at Renfrew Park at 3:00 p.m.

It is a replay of a tie game and Ponoka must win or pack the Stampeder uniforms away in moth balls for another season. If the Stampeders win, they will then open a best of three series with the Arrows for the league championship. But if the Stampeders come roaring through with a victory, then all three clubs will be tied with eight wins and eight losses each. Some sort of a playoff series will then have to be run off to determine the two squads to enter the championship final.

Ritz looks like the pitcher Charlie Lewis will nominate to start this all-important game for Ponoka. Either Boss Morgan himself or Tommy Brant will be hurling for the Dodgers.

You can depend on both clubs shooting the works tomorrow. Dodgers want to keep Ponoka out of the playoffs to save travelling costs —and the Stampeders are determined to get in them and win the championship they lost to the Dodgers last year in that hectic title series.

DOUG KILBURN and A. J. Hopps of the Edmonton Golf and Country Club will be the challengers for the Eaton golf trophy on Sunday afternoon. The Martell brothers will make their defence at the Highlands club starting at 2:00 p.m.

Incidentally Henry Martell has decided against entering the Western Open at Vancouver—expenses involved and taking time off from his job are the reasons.

All members of the Edmonton Golf and Country Club are reminded that the qualifying round of the club championship is to be played off on Sunday morning. There is no official draw and members are asked to arrange their own matches.

Movietown Stages Annual Ball Game To Assist Charity

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 16.—(AP)—Movietown staged its annual baseball burlesque Thursday night, but there were two guys, Dennis Morgan and Preston Foster, definitely out of place. They actually can play baseball.

Morgan supplied the Babe Ruth touch. Foster pitched himself out of a hundred gags—and back into them.

Twenty-five thousand spectators packed Wrigley Field for this charity festival, while half the actors in Hollywood, plus a sprinkling of glamor girls, put on the show.

The rival comedian and leading men's teams rode into the park in huge wagons, which brought this from master of ceremonies Red Skelton:

"Did you see those eight big horses pulling the leading men's wagon? Well it takes that many to haul that load of ham."

Morgan stunned the crowd with one two-bagger, smack, but it was nothing to what happened later. He was catching and became slightly disgusted when a batter couldn't even touch one of Foster's slow balls. He grabbed the bat and hammered the first pitch into the bleachers. Morgan probably won't be permitted to play next year.

The best baseball gag came when two decrepit looking gentlemen stepped from a car at home plate. One had a crutch, the other wore dark glasses and was led by a dog. "The umpires," said Skelton.

New Orleans Race Track To Function

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 16.—(AP)—After a summer-long marathon with a real estate syndicate that wanted the historic fair grounds here for a suburban development, backers of horse racing Friday nosed under the wire with the announcement that the park had been "saved" and that the horses would run again from Christmas to Mardi Gras.

Sylvester W. Labrot, sportsman and industrialist, filed application with the state racing commission requesting sanction of a meet of 40 or more days this winter.

Mapleos Capture First Of Series

Maple Leafs edged out Canadians 5-4 at Renfrew Park on Friday night in the first game of the semi-finals in the Edmonton Junior Baseball League to determine who is to meet the loop-leading Singer's Clothiers.

The Leafs chalked up their win with only three hits against three Canuck pitchers, but they made good use of walks and the two errors made by the opposition and two of their safe bingles drove in runs.

The Canadians were off to a good lead in the first frame when a walk to Des. O'Connor, a hit by Scotty Sneddon along with a pair of errors put the Dick Speer coached aggregation up two.

Leafs came right back with one counter in the first half of the second. D. Danylowich walked and Bud Patry also drew a free ticket to first. The Mapleos' receiver had been nipped in trying to steal second, but R. Wilson's hit sent Patry over with the first run.

In the second, B. Wilson, first man up, walked, went to second on a wild pitch and romped home with the tying counter on Sheckler's single. The centre fielder advanced one station on a passed ball and scored on the catcher's error.

The Canucks kicked in with a third run to tie the score in their half of the same inning. Flemming hit, stole second and rambled home on Jack Chambers' single.

Leafs won the game in the fourth when Sazyn walked three men in succession and Gauthier followed with a hit off Wally Emberg, third Canuck hurler to see service during the game. The first of the two runs came in on second baseman's error and Gauthier sent the second across.

The Canadians drew within one of the Leafs in the sixth, the last inning played. Squire singled to centre field and went to third when the ball got away from Sheckler. He scored on Sazyn's out to first.

Whirlaway Keeps Down Entry List In Travers Stakes

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y., Aug. 16.—(AP)—Whirlaway and a mud-making rain threw a panic into the available three-year-olds Friday and only two were willing to take a chance against the champion in today's Travers running of the historic Travers Stakes.

Sam Riddle's Lord Kitchener and William Dupont's Fairymant were the only others named for the $20,000 renewal of the oldest horse race in the United States.

However, neither the rain nor a racing "rep" bothered the entries for the Spinaway Stakes for two-year-old fillies. Even though Alf Vanderbilt's Petrify, unbeaten in all four of her starts this year, was one of the early entries, nine others were entered for the $10,000 jackpot. Heading those nine rival young ladies were Whirly's stablemate, Mar-Kell, daughter of the same sire (Blenheim II) and William Ziegler Jr's. Rompaway.

Swedish Runners Beat Relay Mark

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 16.—(AP)—A team from the Stockholm fire corps bettered the world record for the four-mile relay Friday, covering the distance in 17 minutes, two and eight-tenths seconds.

The listed record of 17:16.2, was made by a quartet of Indiana university runners in 1937. Two weeks ago the same Stockholm four also beat the world mark for the 6,000-metre relay.

Packy Wins Fast

PAUL KAYOES LUST

CALGARY, Aug. 16.—(CP)—Packy Paul, Richdale, Alta., scored a first round knockout over young Tunney Lust, Medicine Hat, in a heavyweight bout at Victoria pavilion Friday night. Lust took the count after two minutes and fifty-five seconds of fighting. A left hook to the chin that travelled only six inches ended the contest. Both weighed in at 182 pounds.

Alfred Lust, 126, of Medicine Hat, scored a third round knockout over Corporal Tweedie, 127, R.A.F., in the semi-windup. A terrific right to the heart did the damage.

Patsy O'Brien, 147, Edmonton Regiment, stopped Kid Knowles, Seaforth Highlander, 148, in the third round.

Mushy Callaghan, Calgary, was disqualified for fouling in his bout with Curley Morris, Jasper. The referee stopped the bout in the third round.

Vic Pollard, Edmonton middleweight, scored a third round technical knockout over "Bulldog" Manus, Fort Worth, Tex. Referee Wilson stopped the bout to save the American from further punishment.

Gallant-Hearted Joey Dies On Eve Of Final Retirement

CALGARC, Aug 16. — (CP) — Western racing fans today mourned the death of Joey—Canada's leading horse during the years 1930-39, who died here early today at Victoria Park, from where he started his racing career nine years ago.

Owned by H. A. Bruna of Seattle, the little black gelding was dubbed Canada's gamest thoroughbred by track followers in Western Canada whose familiar cry of "here comes Joey!" echoed from western stands through the years of his position of most popular money winner.

CAME FROM BEHIND

"Joey was a horse that invariably came from behind," a track official said yesterday. "He ran on any kind of track—heavy, sloppy, fast or slow, and beat a lot of first class horses in his day."

Joey died on the eve of his well-earned retirement. His owner had planned to ship him back today to the United States.

Bred by late A. Layzelle of Calgary, by Dr. Joe out of Aileen Hoey, Joey made 184 starts and crossed the line with 41 firsts, 40 seconds, 28 thirds and 26 fourths, failing to place 49 times. During his racing years his total winnings were $37,010.

This year Joey contracted a cold on his trip north to Canadian tracks and did not run.

Rites were held by L. P. Jacques of Calgary, he was claimed by his present owner for $700 in 1938, and in the following two years won Bruna $1,000.

Joey placed second in the Manitoba Derby of 1933 to Carhan Queen, and carried a top weight of 126 pounds. Later in that year he repeated the performance in the Alberta Derby. In 1935 he won the Western Canada Stakes, and in 1932 captured the Winnipeg Futurity.

In the Whittier Park Handicap in 1936, Joey beat Help Yourself and ran the mile-and-70-yard course in one minute, 45 4-5 seconds to miss the track record by 2-5 seconds.

Roughies Quarter Now With Bombers

WINNIPEG, Aug. 16—(CP)—Jim Lander, great quarterback of Regina Roughriders in the Western Interprovincial Football Union since 1936, turned out with Winnipeg Blue Bombers Thursday night and it is expected he will play with Bombers this season.

Lander married a Winnipeg girl last autumn and soon afterward took a position with a Winnipeg firm.

He formerly played at Kansas State university and went to Regina in 1936 with Dean Griffing, Roughriders coach and snapback. Regarded as one of the best all-round backfielders in the west, Jim is a fine blocker and defensive back, a good field general and excellent passer and kicker. Coach Reg Threlfall said Lander probably will alternate between quarterback and right halfback with Bombers.

Crabtree Hits Stride

Oldest Gas Houser Of All Paces St. Louis In Batting

By PAUL DIX

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16—(BUP)—"X" usually marks the spot where the body was found but Estel Crabtree, 37-year-old outfielder who is located behind an "X" in the St. Louis Cardinals' box scores is most of his playing days, refuses to play dead.

Crabtree, nicknamed "Ecks" by baseball wags, should not be playing baseball today according to all the laws of nature but he is and that's the story—and it's a good one. It has to be when it concerns a batter who is pacing a team, that included eight 300 hitters.

Estel was a frail-looking guy to begin with when he became a major league outfielder 10 years ago and was sent back to the minors because he could not bat. It seemed the skinny guy with the big bat was through but he bounced around the were ready to set the National League ablaze.

Crabby seldom stays around for bushes for a while and landed with Rochester where last year he climaxed a six-year stint with a batting average of .314.

ONE OF SAM'S BEST

Last winter President Sam Breadon, in one of those unusual machinations for which the Cardinal baseball is famous, okayed the transfer of Crabtree—who was manager of the Wings and doubled as the club's centerfielder—to the Cards and its turned out to be one of the best moves Breadon ever made.

Red Bird fans smiled at Manager Billy Southworth's assertion that Crabtree was better now than when he first tried out with St. Louis in 1933. It was hard to understand how an old man who had just undergone an operation for the removal of a kidney could hold his own with a fire-eating band of youngsters who the full nine innings and is used chiefly as a pinch-hitter. He once turned in a game at third base that had the fans talking for days. He's considered the best judge of fly balls among all the Cards and that includes Terry Moore, one of the most efficient ball hawks in the business. His speed in the field and on the bases is second only to young Johnny Hopp's and that also is fast moving for the Red Birds are considered the fastest outfit in either league.

And as for his batting, it's still hard to believe. At the start of this week he was batting the ball at a .475 clip. He has been at bat 62 times and hit safely 29 times, making six hits in his last 11 times at bat.

Crabtree is expected to help fill the vacancy caused by the injury to regular outfielder Enos Slaughter who is out for the season with a broken collarbone.

No Pitcher Means to Throw "Bean-Ball"

MAYBE it was sun spots. It could have been the heat.

Probably it was just a plain dog-days' run of off centre hurling, but the most sudden and generally distributed epidemic of scatter-ball pitching that's afflicted the industry since John McGraw was an Oriole gave the profession a wild 48 hours this past week end. Five players of three teams were hit, three of them in the head; three were knocked down, one went to the hospital, and another had to be assisted from the flannelled forum holding his arm.

Incidental drama included two incipient riots featuring the flying of pop bottles, bullet-like birds with feathers or feet which roost between times in the Brooklyn grandstand, three threatened mob fights among players, one of which got as far as real blows and brought Mr. James Dykes, "The Umpires' Friend," back into facile action versus a utility infielder, and the collaring of an upper-deck customer by a metropolitan gendarme leading to his eventual separation from 10 fish.

It was an awful two days, but it could have been worse.

BRAVE BUT NOT CRAZY

SOME real talent was cracked in some dangerous places, Dolph Camilli, Dem DiMaggio and Pete Reiser could all have collected fractured skulls. Joe Medwick's arm would have been broken. Joe Kuhel was apparently hurt worse in the dander than he was in the flesh. An Elden Auker slider whamed him in the shoulder. He probably figured it was too close to his head.

That all gets back, of course, to dat ole debbil, "bean ball," but most of it is ridiculous from the standpoint of just plain safety first. "most of it" being the performance in Brooklyn where young Mr. Richard Errickson of the Braves, nee Bees, incapacitated the mighty Muscles Medwick with a swat on the elbow and then proceeded to smile Signor Dolph Camilli and little Pete Reiser upon their conks, or heads, practically in succession before he was advised to absent himself by Prof. Casey Stengel. By this time the first lynching in the history of Brooklyn seemed to be in a fair way of taking form.

Mr. Errickson, an earnest Scandinavian with honest eyes and a rubber arm, was the object of that much wrath as he peregrinated from the premises. Pop bottles sailed like homing pigeons, but on the very heels of common horse-sense, young Mr. Errickson must have been as utterly innocent as a newly piped chick.

There are men in this world brave enough to try almost anything. There are some so dumb that they will essay the unbelievable because they simply don't realize the desperation of their chances. Maybe there is somebody who'd yell, "Hooray for Churchill!" on Unter den Linden, walk into Gargantua's cage and stamp on his toes, start a campaign to outlaw cosmetics as a defence project, or defy lakes on gasoline by drinking the stuff, but even a gent so casual about his transfer to realms uncharted would hesitate to walk into Brooklyn in the present state of grace and endeavor to lay out the best outfielder, the star first baseman and the second leading hitter of the National League by heaving the onion at their trusting heads under the guise of honest pitching.

Young Mr. Errickson is as brave as anybody—but he's brave, not crazy.

TEN-DOLLAR VICTIM

THE only victim in that incipient Donnybrook, as it chanced, was the gentleman who was pinched, since the ballplayers, for unstely, shook off the effects. This gent, however, was unable to shake off the police. They took him firmly by the scruff of the neck and the seat of the pants and gave him what is known as the Spanish walk to the nearest precinct vehicle. He came from Hartford, Ct., and was assessed $10 or three days in the clink.

In the old days, bean balls were occasionally thrown with impunity in an effort to drive a dangerous hit or back from the plate or to make him afraid to stand up there and swing. It's safe to say that there are no pitchers in the game today who do that kind of throwing. The game wouldn't stand for them any longer than it took to find them out. But it doesn't come to that, for no pitcher wan a the credit for having killed or crippled a fellow player. Some of them may be cold-blooded and tough, but I've never seen one yet who appeared to be that tough.

The game's lucky nobody but the refugee from Hartford really got hurt in all that weird flurry, and since he got it in the bank account, he'll probably survive. They say things are getting better in Hartford all the time.

Sports . . . . Roundup

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr. (Pinch-hitting for Eddie Briese)

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.— (AP)— The lowdown on all the beanings the Dodgers have suffered lately is that other Clubs have been switching signals on 'em but the Brooks went right on swiping the old ones.

When Lou Nova checked in at Doc Brier's training camp, Abe Simon packed up and left because "He didn't want to train with somebody who was so recently an invalid."

Words is words.

To make it tougher on sports writers, who were just learning to call him "the eminent ologist," Dick Harlow, the Harvard coach, has switched his hobby from birds eggs to farms so now he's a plerdologist . . . Eddie Walker, the fight manager, lays 'em in the aisles with a story about how he took Henry Armstrong to London when Henry's hands were so sore he had to take violent ray treatments every day.

Today's guest star,

B. M. Aitken, Jr., Loquivilly Times: "Let them keep putting weight on 'Whirly' and Ben Jones won't have jockey worries. He'll ride the horse himself."

The minute interview.

Bill Terry: "I was a good, young ball player an' McGraw didn't teach me a thing. Sure, he bawled me out when I did something wrong, but the man who made me a good ball player was Roger Bresnahan, Mc-Graw's coach."

Australian troops stationed in equatorial Africa have sent out an appeal for sports equipment. They're especially interested in baseball.

Handicap Taken By Lady Barber

CALGARY, Aug. 16.—(CP)—Jockey E. Roy rode both ends of the daily double that paid $322.00 at Victoria park Friday afternoon, sixth day of the Prairie Thoroughbred Breeders' and Racing Association mid-summer meeting.

Roy had the mount on Lady Eneckie, winner of the first race and Major S., winner of the third. The double price was a startling one, considering that the first winner only paid $6.30 straight.

There were two feature events. The Starlet Handicap, a five-furlong race for 3-year-olds, while Hominy Imp, Harold 'Spud" Murphy's claybay gelding winning the Caledonian claiming handicap, fifth race over the one-mile and one-sixteenth route.

DECISIVE WIN

Lady Eneckie, 3-year-old daughter of Lingard and Miss Eneckie, owned by J. W. Ray, of Cisco, Texas, scored a decisive victory in the first race, a distance event of seven furlongs.

The Starlet Handicap, appropriately named in honor of an event that was for 3-year-olds, went to Lee Williams' Lady Barber, daughter of Craigangower and Lobella Ellsworth, Bay Jephs, an outsider in the betting, set the pace, but was overcome during the stretch run.

Major S won for owner Johnny Kipling in the third race, a distance event of seven furlongs.

BLANKET FINISH

A photo was necessary to decide all three positions in the fourth race, with Drop In, 3-year-old son of Nocturnal and Pera Gold getting the call by a nose over Lady Kate, while Tab's Big was a bangup third. Little Hero, 7-year-old son of Greeneck and Florence F, made it two straight at the meeting for owner W. Chaffen, of St. James, Man., by taking the main event over the one-mile and one-eighth route.

Owner L. Williams, of Edmonton, secured his second win of the day when Ekery, with Jockey Young up, took the major end of the purse in the seventh event over the mile and one-sixteenth route.

Reconstruction Of Educational Policies Urged

WINNIPEG, Aug. 16.—(CP)—A declaration defining the aims of a democratic society and proclaiming principles for educational reconstruction was adopted Friday at the final session of the Canadian Teachers' Federation conference here.

The statement, endorsed by delegates from across the dominion, declared that the first duty of society is to guarantee to every man, woman and child equal opportunity for education regardless of race, birth, sex, income or creed.

SOURCE OF POWER

The declaration said that schools should be considered the main sources of new power for the community and held that unemployment among youth should be eliminated by the common effort of all, not by government action alone.

A lengthy report on education financing was submitted to the conference by Dr. Kenneth F. Argue of the University of Alberta, and formed the basis for a resolution favoring federal grants to the provinces for education purposes.

A. J. H. Powell of Edmonton said the only conclusion to be drawn from the report was that while the Dominion could not be expected to handle every widely diversified provinces as Quebec and British Columbia, it had a clear duty to see that every Canadian child has an adequate basic education.

Modern Puzzles

—BY GERALD L. KAUFMAN—

TWENTY-FIVE LETTERS

It is impossible to combine all 26 letters of the alphabet into familiar words using each letter once and once only, since the letter Q uses up two of the six vowels. However, here is a puzzle which uses all the letters except Q, and two of the words are already given.

All you need do is to find four more words, making sure you use each of the missing letters below, once and once only. As a hint, we advise you to start by trying to find a 5-letter word in which the letter Y is the only vowel.

One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "Spiritual sense, contradicting the material senses, involves intuition, hope, faith, understanding, fruition, reality" (p. 298).

TODAY'S MESSAGE

By Rev. T. E. Crane, Nokomis, Saskatchewan
(Supply Pastor of Edmonton Pentecostal Tabernacle)

Calvary And The British Commonwealth

WHEN we think of the important place of the British Commonwealth among the World Nations and her present gigantic task of procuring liberty for the captive and preserving freedom and the free, we cannot help but think of that gigantic task which was accomplished at a place called Calvary.

It was there the great battle of all time was fought. It was there the greatest and most far reaching Victory was won. It was there that the eternal enemy of God, Mankind and good, was defeated and put to open shame. To win this Victory, great sacrifice was demanded. Jesus Christ willingly made that sacrifice, that Humanity might be free. He suffered intense agony, His sweat as it were great drops of blood. He poured out His life's blood willingly. He breathed out His life's breath in one last prayer for Victory. He died, yet He lived again a greater and more abundant life. He finished the work and Humanity had provisionally that Spiritual freedom which all men crave.

The British Commonwealth is, as it were, going to her Calvary. She must come forth Victorious if mankind is to retain that dearly bought freedom—spiritual and physical. What will the cost be? — the same as that of Calvary. It means great effort and unstinted sacrifice. It means extreme suffering and much bloodshed. But above all it means much prayer. It was through much unselfish prayer to God, who is the source of all power, that Jesus Christ received the overcoming power that brought Victory.

So will it be with the British Commonwealth when her peoples turn to God and pray that He will grant the Victory. Woodrow Wilson, first Great War president of the United States, in speaking about "brute force" said, "That might as right does not triumph in the end, but that physical force can never withstand the impact of Spiritual force. It is that Spiritual force that we must have if we are to be victorious. It will be ours as we seek God and to do His will. Then shall all men be free."

Three Soloists For Sunday Services At Knox, Metropolitan

The united summer services between Knox and Metropolitan United churches will be continued during August in Knox, with Rev. R. McElroy Thompson, of Metropolitan in charge. Sunday morning Rev. Thompson will preach on "The Simplicity that is in Christ," and in the evening his theme will be "Love's Last Appeal." The Knox choir under the direction of Jack Williams will be in charge of the services of praise, with Miss Enid Griffith; Jack Williams and Wally Rempel, of the R.C.A.F., as soloists for the day.

"God Is Love" Sermon Subject

Rev. J. MacBeath Miller will preach on "God is Love" at the morning service Sunday at First Presbyterian church. Topic of Rev. Miller's evening sermon will be "Some Things the Church Will Do For You." Guest soloist Sunday will be Mrs. C. MacDonald, of Sydney, N.S. Bernard Young will be at the organ, while the music will be directed by Henry Atack.

"Pauses that Refresh" will be the sermon topic Sunday morning at St. Andrew's church. C. Oscroft will have charge of the service. Leonard Wilson will speak on "Telling the Old Story" at the service at Westmount church.

Regular service will be held at Strathcona and Rupert Street churches Sunday, with Rev. Peter Fisher and Rev. William Simons in charge.

Debunker

Many erroneously believe that if a person's hairline is low on the forehead he is a nitwit. This assumes that the I.Q. of a person is registered by high brows and low brows; but it is all bunk, psychologists say. The hairline has nothing whatever to do with intelligence; neither has the height of the forehead. A person may feel dumb if his hair grows down to his eyebrows, but he may be a genius. There is no external marking that indicates either high or low intelligence. We all have more brains than we ever use, and we can be glad we do not have the hairline of apes.

The average speed of worker bees engaged in making honey is about 15 miles an hour.

Points For Parents

By EDITH THOMAS WALLACE

Mother: "All my life I've wanted to paint and now that the children are older, I'm taking some lessons."

Mother: "Mary can't paint very well but I'm hoping she'll improve. I always wanted to take lessons but I didn't get to."

Expecting children to satisfy their parents' unfulfilled ambitions is hardly fair to the children.

McCoy Health Service

With the rapid pace at which we on this continent live, we are inclined to overlook the fact that the body machine, like any other machine, is capable of wearing out if it is not looked after properly, and fed with the right fuel. We know that as old age approaches, arterial hardening takes place to some extent, but there is no excuse of the arteriosclerosis of old age to become manifest in earlier life. Arterial hardening is the result of wear and tear, and I am convinced that by proper care, this sign of approaching senility can be avoided.

I do not mean that a man of 75 can have the arteries of a man of 40, but I have seen many cases where a man of 40 had arteries of a man of 75. One of the causes of arterial hardening is hypertension or high blood pressure and this may be brought about by high tension in living, or otherwise overstrain. Of course, those with Bright's disease, chronic intoxications (systemic toxemia) and those who eat to excess may also have a high blood pressure. However, I am discussing hardening of the arteries due to violations of the rules of life and the only known remedy for the condition is to revert to normalcy before it is too late. Many of those affected go gaily on their way with few symptoms, they work hard, they play hard and to all outward appearances are vigorous and eat well. Quite often the pulse is visible.

The results of arterial hardening often bring permanent invalidism or sudden death in the form of a blood clot or disaster in the brain, or what is commonly known as a "stroke." Angina pectoris may develop, and the strain placed on the overburdened heart may cause it to fail suddenly. The best plan is to have a checkup on the blood pressure and a good physician will soon inform you that if you are affected, then you must change your way of life if you want to keep on living. A careful, quiet life is essential and the diet should be simple and restricted. Any obesity should be removed by a special diet, avoiding the sugars, starches and fats and using plenty of the green fresh vegetables, both in the cooked and raw form. Complete bowel evacuations should take place, and if they do not then the enema should be resorted to. Those of my readers who would like to have more complete information on the subject are invited to send for Dr. McCoy's special articles entitled "Arterial Hardening" and "High Blood Pressure." Just address your request to the McCoy Health Service, enclosing a large self-addressed envelope and six cents in loose stamps and both copies will be mailed right away.

More Edmonton Firms Cut Deliveries To Save Gasoline

New System Is Adopted As Conservation Step: Public Gives Support

Falling rapidly in line with the great drive to conserve gasoline to defeat Hitler, several more sections of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce Saturday announced measures for reducing deliveries by motor vehicles.

The flour and feed section of the chamber, through its chairman E. G. Ellerton of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Ltd., composed of 10 companies and six mills, stated: "We are cooperating closely to save every drop of gasoline we can, by eliminating all unnecessary deliveries. We are receiving grand support from the general public, which deserves high praise for its sacrifice."

Edmonton's wholesale fruit, tobacco and grocers, and seven lumber firms reached agreement Friday on delivery systems designed to conserve gasoline.

The wholesale group decided to limit their deliveries to a maximum of one daily to all outlying and rural areas. Deliveries to downtown sections will be curtailed also.

DEFINITE SCHEDULE

Special deliveries will be abandoned by the lumber companies, it was agreed, except when orders are for full truck loads. Other deliveries will be placed on a definite schedule.

Other sections of the chamber are scheduled to meet next week and decide on what steps they will take to conserve gasoline.

The city dairies will meet Tuesday at 3 p.m. in the Edmonton Cold Storage company offices under the chairmanship of E. T. Love.

ROAD REPORT

Saturday's road report: Heavy rains during the night have made roads muddy in the Peace River district, at Mt. Paul, Wainwright, Chauvin, Hughenden, Provost, Cherhill and Mayerthorpe. Rain is general this morning in the central and north sections of the province.

Commissioners Decide Against Re-Zoning Area

Edmonton's Town Planning Commission Friday refused to rezone the area on 84 street from Jasper avenue to 110 avenue, thus paving the way for the issuance of a building permit to the Mutiart Lumber, Ltd., for the erection of lumber yards and mills on properly recently purchased from the city.

The commission received a delegation from residents in the district protesting against the proposed erection of lumber yards and a lumber mill in the district, and asked that the area be re-classified as residential. The area is now zoned as heavy industrial territory.

Ald. Sidney Bowcott considered that the area should be re-zoned and submitted a motion to this effect which was beaten by a three-to-two vote.

In refusing to make the re-classification, the commission recommended to the city council's bylaws committee that "No permit be issued for the erection of any building, industrial or commercial on the triangle abutting on Jasper avenue."

This action was taken to prevent the erection of any building close to Jasper avenue which would detract from the boulevarding and park spaces now existing at this point.

Some of the members of the Town Planning Commission expressed the opinion that the entire zoning question should be reconsidered by a committee of the city council and the commission, but no action was taken implementing this suggestion.

Hundreds of young boys and girls will be going back to school shortly to take up their different studies. Have you ever stopped to consider the terrific strain they put on their eyes and the little muscles that control their rotation, if their eyes are not normal? Will they continue to accept the abuse or will they break down?

The need of accurate vision and the ability to judge different distances in this modern age of ours is increasing daily, and the boy or girl who has these qualifications are the ones who will reach the set goal.

Have you had your girls' or boys' eyes examined lately. If not we would advise you to bring them to Jackson Bros'. Optical Parlor and have our registered Optometrist give their eyes a thorough eyesight examination. He will tell you if they need glasses or not.

If they need glasses, they may wear them while paying for them by using our well established easy pay plan, in weekly or monthly payments.

For Hollywood Picture Needs

By FRANCOISE MARTIN

"I want a wide, swift jungle river, and I want it filled with a lot of elephants swimming upstream," says a Hollywood director, and without batting an eye, the construction division of the studio builds a river containing six million gallons of water, at a cost of $76,000, and another studio official arranged for 13 circus elephants to be trained by a "lead elephant" led with a string attached to one of its ears.

That's the way things happen in the United States movie centre, according to Harry Stevenson, former Edmontonian, who is now assistant superintendent of construction with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He has been with M.G.M. for 15 years. Mr. Stevenson, an employee of Burns and Co. Ltd., here for 11 years, left the city Saturday with his wife, after a 10-day visit in Edmonton. They were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. Eling, 8810 105 street.

Although the making of films was almost 100 per cent fun, at one time, when plots were constructed during production, Hollywood has settled down to a thorough business, now, Mr. Stevenson said, with each film plotted, all sets designed and constructed, and all action outlined, well before any "shooting" starts.

As assistant superintendent of construction, Mr. Stevenson travels around the studio, supervising construction.

Often sets depicting scenes a few miles away are built within the studio, because it is less expensive than to take the entire unit of stars and equipment to the actual scene of the picture. Mr. Stevenson told of building a swimming pool at the studio, exactly like the one at Sun Valley in northern California, and of making the steam from the water by fans playing on "dry ice" inserted in the pool edge.

City blocks and street fronts are part of the stock equipment of the studio he said, and "we already have for use our 'small town street', our 'New England street', our 'Brown Stone front', our 'East side street', and our 'Waterfront street', whenever they are needed for a film."

Actual construction often requires the greatest of skill and detailed work, he said. "Staircases," he pointed out, "have to be made even better than they are in most homes, because we have to prevent squeaks and flaws."

STARS AND WAR EFFORT

Hollywood stars are contributing time and talent to the Allied war cause, he said, and one star alone has contributed $100,000 to the United Services in the U.S. The stars have given most favorable reports of Canada, to their friends, following the visits of many of them to the Dominion recently.

Garbo, top-ranking star of M.G.M., still "wants to be alone", says Mr. Stevenson, who reports that the Swedish star takes her acting very seriously and doesn't like being disturbed on the set.

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION

Do you agree with a prominent lady writer who stated recently that men are "merely mice" for failing to take advantage of the wide variety of clothing now offered them in place of the usual conservative dress?

THE ANSWERS

HERB CUNNINGHAM, collector: For once I agree with the ladies. A man who passes up his few opportunities for comfort merely because of his pride deserves to keep on roasting.

GUS GUMAS, hat cleaner: The writer could not have been very much acquainted with the south. Up here the hot season is so short that man often finds it impractical to make the required adjustment.

FRANK RAE, salesman: As far as dress for pleasure and leisure is concerned, I heartily agree with the lady writer. I cannot, however, be convinced that proper substitutes for business clothing have been found to replace the present conservative dress.

* * *

MRS. HUGHES, clerk: Men are privileged to do as they please in that regard, and since they take advantage of nearly everything else, I can't for the life of me understand why they have not taken advantage of a more comfortable type of clothing.

Polio Cases For Province Now Total 34

Infantile paralysis cases in Alberta now total 34 as several new cases were reported Saturday, according to Dr. A. C. McGugan, provincial director of communicable diseases. The three latest cases to be reported are a man of 35 years from Drumheller; a youth 19 years old from Innisfail, and one case from this city. On Friday a case was brought in here from Jasper.

Dr. McGugan said that a peculiarity of the onset this year was that the incidence among older groups was greater this year than in previous years. This was to be expected in view of the observations of the disease.

He said that older people appeared susceptible to more severe clinical manifestations than others, probably because they had not had an opportunity of establishing immunity.

Getting Around
with JOHN OLIVER

HAVING read with apprehension of the "freezing" of raw silk supplies and viewed with considerable alarm the inroads being made on the available reserves of ladies' silk stockings through the rush of patriotic housewives the same at city stores, thoughts turned to another commodity and article of wearing apparel concerning mere man. In perturbation of mind, a haberdasher acquaintance was approached and with heart palpitating, I inquired regarding the status of the silk tie.

Now, it is well known that the "old school tie" has taken an awful drubbing since this war began and more especially in England. But it was the silk tie rather than the school tie that intrigued my interest. The aforesaid sartorially-expert friend disclosed the information that there was no corresponding rush of males to purchase silk neckties when the coming shortage of the basic material was announced. Ruefully, he announced that there had been no rush to buy neckties of any sort.

Deciding to make an afternoon of it, calls were made upon several emporiums at which ties are vended and the result was the same in each case. The necktie business had remained constant under the threat of rapidly - dwindling stocks and that was the best that could be said about it, if, in fact, anything at all was said. Merchants consulted, declared that women buy a large number of the neckties sold, but they did not appear to take cognizance of the ramifications of the looming shortage or appreciate that neckbands would be affected. They concentrated their high pressure buying on stockings. Male customers remained indifferent, displaying no concern and evidently owning little about the type of available neckwear.

This emphasizes the fact that the woman who really makes a practice of being herself, can recite the articles of apparel she happens to be wearing at the time. She can give full details of her little dipper hat for fair weather or foul. At length, she will tell of her smooth, slender, petite, danceable, dineable, delectable suede shoes designed to flatter ankles, hug insteps and keep her dancing till dawn.

Perhaps she will have occasion to describe her long-suffering wool dress, soft as a cream puff, 90 per cent wool and 10 per cent rabbits hair, with fres and easy shoulders, white rayon seersucker removable dickey and in natural grey color. Yes the beautiful brainy beauties can tell all about their well-made clothes that not even life on a closet hook can discourage and whether they are bowling clothes, early-evening-hour clothes or hamburger-and-coffee clothes, rest assured the story will be complete.

Not so the men. Ask a mere male to tell you without first checking up, the color or pattern of the tie he is wearing. No doubt he can give you his latest and greatest golf scores, can tell immediately how many ball games Lefty Grove has won, who's going to win the world series and perhaps he can even pronounce most of the names now appearing in the Russian-German war communiques. But his tie? That is only the article around his neck. He may have worn it every day from the time it was bought, but he still does not know its color and whether it is knitted or silk. Ties are okay. Theoretically they should match the eyes, socks, shirts, suit and handkerchief. If they do—and on occasions such blending is found—it is usually because the hidden hand of a woman has been responsible.

Miss Cameron Pretty Bride Of Saturday

Interest of many friends in social and University of Alberta circles is centred in the wedding which took place quietly in the rectory of St. Anthony's church on Saturday at the morning hour of ten o'clock when Sheila Ewing Cameron, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Cameron, of Edmonton, became the bride of Mr. Arthur Joseph Beauchamp, son of Mrs. Beauchamp and the late Mr. Louis E. Beauchamp, also of the city. Father Murphy officiated.

The bride is a graduate of the University, receiving her B.Sc. degree in Arts in 1936. During her college years she became affiliated with Delta Gamma women's fraternity. Mr. Beauchamp is completing his final year in the faculty of medicine this year and is a member of Zeta Psi fraternity.

For the ceremony, at which she was unattended, the bride chose a dressmaker's suit in beige colored boucle with a sheer blouse of turquoise blue. Brown accessories, hat, gloves and alligator, completed her ensemble. At her shoulder she wore a corsage of white gardenias and ferns.

The bridegroom, too, was unattended.

After the service Mr. and Mrs. Cameron, the bride's parents, entertained at their home on Saskatchewan Drive at a reception to a hundred guests in honor of the bride and bridegroom. Receiving with the bridal couple, Mrs. Cameron was smart in a silk afternoon frock of green and white polka dot and white accessories. Her flowers were apricot-colored gladioli buds en corsage. Mrs. Beauchamp, mother of the bridegroom, chose a crepe jacket dress of pastel blue. To complete her outfit she wore black accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

Decorated in a patriotic motif, the bride's table was graced with red roses, white sweet peas and blue cornflowers and centred with the three-tiered wedding cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Beauchamp left following the reception for a two weeks' honeymoon trip by motor. For travelling the bride carried a top-coat of English covert cloth. Returning to the city at the end of August, Mr. and Mrs. Beauchamp will make their home here.

Miss J. Wood Is Married At Christ Church

QUIETLY performed in Christ church, the marriage of Joan Wood and Mr. Edward J. H. Greene, took place on Saturday morning, in the presence of the immediate families and a few friends. The ceremony was performed by Rev. N. J. Godkin.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Wood of Edmonton, formerly of Calgary, and Mr. Greene, who is a lecturer in modern languages at the University of Alberta, is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Greene of Edmonton. Attending the bride were her cousin, Miss Margaret Wood, and Miss Patricia Rankin, both of Calgary.

Bride Weds On Her Father's Birthday

Choosing her father's birthday for her wedding, Margaret MacIver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm MacIver of Edmonton, became the bride of Fraser Birkenhead, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Birkenhead of Kamloops, B.C., at a pretty ceremony in Wesley United church at the afternoon hour of two o'clock on Saturday. Dr. E. T. Scragg officiated.

To complement her dress, a two-piece model of Queen's blue crepe fashioned with three-quarter length sleeves, a tight-fitting bodice and a smart round neckline, the bride wore a navy blue picture hat, with gloves and shoes. Her flowers, a corsage of pale pink sweetheart roses, were in delicate contrast to the blue of her afternoon frock.

Dainty white lace collar and cuffs accentuated the neckline and sleeves of the navy blue chiffon dress worn by the bridesmaid, Miss C. Dowling. With her frock she wore a navy picture hat and white gloves and shoes. Roses en corsage were pinned at her shoulder.

Mr. H. Staub supported the bridegroom as best man.

During the wedding ceremony Miss J. Henry was at the piano.

Congratulations and best wishes were extended to the couple following the wedding when Mr. and Mrs. MacIver entertained at a bouffet luncheon. In the drawing rooms, tall spikes of mid-summer gladioli were arranged in front of the fireplace. The bride's table was arranged with her wedding cake, a gift of her aunt, Mrs. J. Staub, tall white tapers and white streamers.

Receiving the guests with the newly-married couple, Mrs. MacIver wore a dress of navy chiffon and navy blue accessories. Her flowers were a corsage of pastel sweet peas. Recent Garden Party Is Compliment To Miss Dorothy Banks

Emerald lawns at the home of Mrs. F. J. Miller were the scene of a delightful little gathering one late afternoon recently, when Mrs. Ted Miller entertained at a towel shower in compliment to Miss Dorothy Banks, popular bride-elect of mid-August.

Dainty pink sweet peas and tall green candles formed a charming arrangement on the tea table, which was presided over by Miss Eleanor McNair.

Miss Banks was complimented on another occasion recently, when Mrs. W. O. McEleney entertained several friends at a miscellaneous shower in her honor.

50 DAY MONDAY ARMY & NAVY

Are We Ready For The Question?

By Nellie McClung

Nellie McClung

HAVING met German women at international gatherings, women doctors, journalists, and members of parliament, I wonder how it could happen that the women of Germany have all been silenced by the Nazi tyrants. Germany, before Hitler, had 34 women in the Reichstag, and more than 100 in the state assemblies, and many more in municipal positions. The handicaps had been removed in education, legal status, and matters relating to employment. The German women compared favorably with the other women of Europe prior to Hitler.

But all at once the scene was changed. Hitler disapproved of women in any public capacity. "Women in public life," he said, "is the beginning of weakness,"—and out they went. They lost their jobs overnight. Only teachers in the primary rooms were left. Women's societies were ordered to disband. Women were forbidden to attend conventions in other countries.

KEEP SILENCE

Only one organization remained—the Women Workers—"Frauenwerk" they are called, and their platform is simple. They must perform humble service for the nation renouncing pleasure, luxury or any show of independence. Hitler's desire for women is to have as many children as they can, in or out of matrimony, and to perform the hard work of the nation, and above all—to keep silence.

There are now 26 compulsory labor services for women. They have taken over the heaviest manual labor to release men for the army; when they are paid wages it is never more than half that paid to men.

An American woman who was in Germany after the war said she talked to a German woman about this, and the reply she got was this, "Better run with the wind than against it."

Which has a familiar sound, and brings back a certain book called "The Wave of the Future," in which the author changed the figure a bit, but the advice was the same.

However, we are not taking it! There is a Wave of the Future, but it is a wave of independence, a wave of courage, and gallantry, and not a wave of surrender. A friend in Glasgow sometimes sends me a Glasgow paper, pitifully small in size, but not dimmed in spirit. When I read all the way the people of that city, even the children, endured the bombings. A little boy last spring, on a cold raw morning, carried his five-year-old sister out of the ruins of their shattered home. He was hurt too, and his teeth chattered, but this is what he said, "I'm no feared. It's the cold that makes me shiver!"

I cannot believe all the German women are the dumb driven cattle they appear to be. The leaders may be in prison, or dead, but there remains a fragment, a core of courage surely.

MUCH QUARRELLING

A speaker yesterday told about the air raid shelters in Germany, contrasting their atmosphere of despondency and gloom with the helpfulness displayed in the British shelters. He said there was so much quarrelling in the German shelters that the order of Silence had been issued. I am glad to hear the people have spunk enough to fight. The same speaker said the average German does not believe any of Hitler's talk of their being a superior race. But they were quite prepared to take the loot from the conquered countries. Indeed, so long as butter and bacon came from Denmark, silk stockings and beautiful dress materials came from France, they were ready to receive them, use them, and be glad of these trophies of conquest.

However, let us remember Germany is a vast country and we know little of the inner mind of the people. It is now a country of spies, of deception, fear and gloom. The people have no heart for this war—how could they? It has brought them cold houses, bare cupboards, shabby clothes, long casualty lists, and now air raids. They have in addition to all this, a bad conscience, and they know they are facing defeat. They also know they are the most hated people in the world, and that eats into them, for the Germans like to be praised. All the glitter and glory has gone from this war for them, and some bitter truths are being revealed.

MANIAC'S DANCE

Let us remember that men and women have gone to concentration camps rather than join in the maniac's dance. A Jewish woman expelled from Germany told me that there were as many non-Jews in the concentration camps as Jews —people who would not persecute their neighbors or spy on them; people who held to the truth when it would have been easy to recant. Let us think of them with admiration and pray that they may have peace in their souls, strength to endure, and a speedy deliverance from their bondage.

All around us are signs of victory. There is a new note of confidence in the voices which come over the air. We hear of the trouble the Gestapo is having in the robbed countries, even Quisling in Norway guarded by traitors like himself, is having attacks of conscience which cause him to cry out in his sleep.

FATE OF TYRANTS

The whole forces of nature are fighting for us. Rain in Russia, cold nights, mosquitoes. German radio now has to make excuses for the slowness of their army's progress. We are growing stronger as they grow weaker. History comforts us as we recall the fate of tyrants. Lord Dunsany puts it in excellent verse:

"When at the head of his immense array
Napoleon entered Moscow, and his might Seemed to have risen to its utmost height,
Elba was only 18 months away.
And he had genius, and his hand held sway
From sunny Paris to the Arctic night.
Surely for him there was not then in sight
The downward slope of the world-conqueror's way.
It's the same road, whoever travels it
Faster and faster must that traveller run
As the road slants more steeply to the pit
And Alexander clutching Babylon,
Or Caesar trying to dictate to Rome,
Or raging Hitler, go the same way home."

We are thrilled to think of the cosmopolitan character of our allies. The brave people—the honorable, honest people in the conquered countries are our friends. We have the patriots. Germany has the scum, the plotters, the traitors, the Quislings, the Lavals and Darlans, who for personal safety, profit and power have sold out their country.

GLINT AND GLORY

Surely out of this great union of brave people, who love liberty, we shall be able to evolve a new order. But to this we must have a living working faith, a faith so full of fire, it will spread. Defeat of the Nazis is the first step. But after that comes the real struggle. Cruelty and deception, greed and tyranny will not be slain by weapons of steel. After the last war we used to talk about a "moral substitute for war"—something that would fire the imagination of our people like the fife and drum of battle; something that would have all the glint and glory of an army with banners.

But we did not find it, and the post-war world went wild over pleasure and money, lawlessness and big business, and yet was hungry at heart and frustrated in mind, as man will ever be until he finds God.

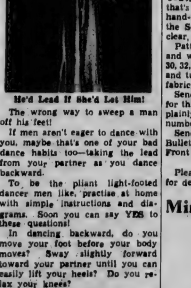

This time we must not fail. There surely will be "worlds to mend" when the last peace is made. How will we be as the world menders? Are we training for it? Is anyone being trained for it? Are we thinking about it, or is there still only the thought of vengeance in our minds?

We have to give the people of Europe a plan, a program, a purpose corresponding to the vision Christ imparted to His disciples as they walked on the road to Emmaus and of which they said afterwards to each other, "Did not our hearts burn within us as He talked to us!" Not only did they talk about it but they became changed men, from that hour—fearless, happy, conquering men, with hands of healing and words of power.

We better look up that grand old hymn which has a place in all the hymn books—there is a challenge in every line: "The Son of God goes forth to war!"

Home Lessons Good For Unpopular Dance Errors

He'd Lead If She'd Let Him!

The wrong way to sweep a man off his feet!

If men aren't eager to dance with you, maybe that's one of your bad dance habits too—taking the lead from your partner as you dance backward.

To be the pliant light-footed dancer men like, practise at home with simple instructions and diagrams. Soon you can say YES to these questions:

In dancing backward, do you move your foot before your body moves? Sway slightly forward toward your partner until you can easily lift your heels? Do you relax your knees?

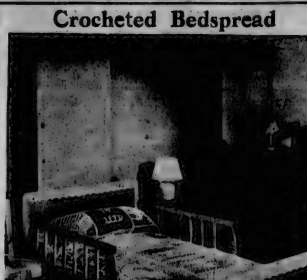

To dance backward without getting stepped on, you of course swing your leg way back, leading with your toe.

Or is your main dancing trouble just not knowing your steps?

Our 32-page booklet has clear footprint diagrams and instructions showing the most popular dance steps and variations—rumba, Conga, tango, fox-trot, slow fox-trot, waltz, shag. Tells how to lead and follow, gives tips on posture, rhythm, different dance positions.

Minute Make-Ups

Here is a "secret" home recipe for a lovely mask. Beat one egg well. To this add one-half cup of mineral or cosmetic oil, one tablespoonful of fuller's earth. Blend. Keep in ice box or some other cool place. Spread on when in hurry. Bathe. Remove. Your skin will look lovely!

Dorothy Dix Says:

Dear Dorothy Dix—You speak of girls who smoke and drink and pet as "wild" girls. I contradict you. I do all those things, yet I do not consider myself wild. A girl must do these things to get dates. Perhaps there are some fellows that don't demand these things, but they are the ones who take you on a street car to a show, or else expect you to sit home of an evening with them. Just as a fellow picks out a girl who knows how to dance and can stand a few drinks and is willing to pet, etc., for a good time, just so does a girl pick a fellow with the same idea in mind. Naturally, if she intended to marry, she positively would not pick such a man. When I contemplate matrimony, I shall go looking for one of those fellows you call "nice." Then I shall cut out the booze, the smoking and late hours and play square with him, and eventually settle down to a home and babies.

JANICE.

Answer—Well, if drinking and smoking and petting do not make a wild girl, what does? You tell me. Doubtless you girls, who must get dates at any cost, have your own deadline that you never intend to cross, but the trouble is that when girls and boys are on a home party they get pooped and cannot see clearly enough to tell how far they have gone.

In the old days, when prohibition made drinking common among women, the test of a girl's character was whether she drank or not, because it was recognized that under the influence of liquor a girl would do things she would not think of doing when she was sober. So if it was said of a girl that she never touched drink people believed the best of her, just as they believed the worst of her if she did.

A clean man wants for his wife and the mother of his children a woman who has kept herself pure and innocent. He isn't looking for damaged goods. He doesn't want the girl who has been manhandled, whose lips have been soiled with a thousand kisses, and who has nerves and a body ravaged by dissipation and bad hours.

Of course, plenty of girls marry men who have been rounders who promise to settle down and reform when they are married, but not often yet, thank God, are willing to accept the double standard in marriage. Most men demand purity in their wives, and it is a good thing for the race, because morality in women is a biological as well as a moral necessity.

What To Do

Have you ever been on a canoe picnic? It's lots of fun, and a practical way to keep cool. There are many streams and rivers, and just as many places to hire canoes. This type of outing will take you far away from the busy highways and crowded picnic grounds.

Of course, the picnic basket is the all important item. Pack paper plates, napkins, a sturdy table cloth, paper cups and whatever eating utensils you will need. If you have a good thermos jug, pack it with an iced beverage or hot soup. Make

Your Baby And Mine

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Small babies exhibit the most delightful small-baby behavior—some of which is thoroughly appreciated by their fatuous relatives—some of which leave them with wrinkled forehead and worried emotions.

Even at birth the baby is far from being a small lump. He can cough, yawn, suckle, swallow and, at six weeks, give a fleeting smile. All of these the mother enjoys. But let him hiccup or sneeze and, bless me, how she runs to the baby books to discover what to do about that!

We might expect that when baby is ushered to the finitely dusty atmosphere of any ordinary environment he would be inspired to sneeze. Babies do sneeze and when there is obviously no aftermath of the sneeze, no stuffed-up or runny nose, then the sneezing is just what one would expect, the baby's gentle effort to clear his head of the irritating particles he is inhaling.

As for hiccups, who ever saw a baby who didn't hiccup? The mother's fear of these rhythmical gulpings possibly is caused by something she has read about the seriousness of hiccups in sick persons. Her baby's hiccups, like his sneezes, come from irritation. In this case it is soured milk particles in the baby's throat, caused when he blows up bits of the last recent dinner. A spoonful of clear water will wash away the temporary irritation and the hiccups with it.

And this is as good a time as any to mention that perennial worry all new mothers feel for "soured" milk. Inevitably, if the baby spits up curdled milk the mother has a moment of panic. "The milk was terribly sour," she explains as if that made the spitting up so much more terrible.

She should have a worse panic if the milk lay in baby's stomach without becoming soured. That would be something. The moment food goes into the stomach it is set upon by the digestive juices which are extremely acid in content. The longer the food remains in the stomach the more thoroughly acidified it becomes until it is thoroughly acid and fluid and can leave the stomach.

So all of these fears are groundless. Babies' sneezes don't indicate an apoplectic cold; they hiccup without being ill, they spit up soured milk. If the milk has been in the stomach for 15 minutes or longer.

None of these things should cause the mother to run to the phone for help. They are just as ordinary behavior as these others—reflex actions which the mother views with indifference.

Our leaflet, Baby's First Six Weeks, describes baby's feedings, airings, baths, weighing; all the things the new mother wants to know about. It will be sent free on request if you will enclose a three-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Mint Preserves Are Rich In Vitamins

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

It's a dandy thing to strew the stew with vitamins and keep pellagra out of your drawing room with dainty dishes full of whatever will keep pellagra out of your drawing room, but it's not enough, nor less distinguished an authority than Paul V. McNutt tells us, to serve food that is nutritious. It must contain, he told the National Nutrition Conference for Defense, the vitamin of human enjoyment.

Such lily-gilding, every housewife knows, takes imagination and plenty of smart management. Caviar isn't the only fancy "fixin'" that forms high. But there are even more gorgeous garnishes for inexpensive meals that don't blitz the budget—mint preserves, for example.

The delicious mint flavor that can make a king's dish of lamb chops, roasts and stews is glorified by Margaret Sawyer, American expert on preserving and canning, in several varieties of human enjoyment: recipes that you'll be wanting to try out on your own julep patch.

The peach-apricot-mint preserve is a brand-new idea. It goes well with chicken or ham, also with cream cheese and crisp wafers for dessert. Use English type mint if possible because it gives better flavor than spearmint or peppermint.

MINT-PEAR PRESERVES

(About 6 half-pint jars or 8 6-ounce glasses)

Eight cups (2¾ pounds) prepared pears, 1 cup water, 5½ cups (2½ pounds) sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 2 tablespoons finely chopped mint leaves, firmly packed.

Wash and part about 4½ pounds firm, ripe pears. Cut into quarters, remove cores, and cut crosswise in thin slices. Weigh or measure into large preserving kettle. Add water. Bring to a boil and simmer, covered, about 20 minutes, or until tender, stirring occasionally. Add sugar, salt, and lemon juice. Mix carefully.

Cook slowly until mixture boils, stirring only until sugar is dissolved. Boil rapidly about 20 minutes, or until fruit is clear and syrup is somewhat thick, stirring frequently to prevent scorching. Skim. Add mint and re-heat just to boiling. Pour into clean, hot, sterilized jars or glasses and seal at once.

MINTED FRUIT RELISH

(About 9 half-pint jars)

Five cups (2 pounds) prepared watermelon rind, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 medium-sized oranges, 2 cups (3 pounds) sugar, 2 cups cider vinegar, ¾ cup water, 3 cups (1½ pounds) drained, crushed pineapple, 1-3 cup finely chopped mint leaves, firmly packed.

Remove green skin and all pink flesh from rind of firm, but not over-ripe watermelon. Put rind through food chopper, using coarse knife. Drain and weigh or measure. Cover with water, add salt, and let stand overnight. Drain. Scrub oranges, cut into eighths, remove seeds and all coarse membrance. Cut crosswise in every thin slices. Cover watermelon rind and oranges with fresh water. Bring to a boil and simmer, covered, about 45 minutes, or until watermelon rind is tender. Drain. Mix sugar, vinegar, and ¾ cup water in large preserving kettle. Bring to a boil, stirring only until sugar is dissolved.

Boil rapidly until syrup is thick. Add watermelon-orange mixture, pineapple, and mint tied loosely in cheesecloth bag. Bring slowly to a boil and boil about 40 minutes, or until fruit and rind are clear, and syrup is somewhat thick, stirring frequently to prevent scorching. Remove mint bag and skim. Pour into clean, hot, sterilized jars and seal at once.

PEACH-APRICOT-MINT PRESERVES

(About 8 half-pint jars or 10 6-ounce glasses)

One and one-half cups (9 ounces) dried apricots, 6 cups (2¼ pounds) prepared peaches, 6 cups (2 pounds, 10 ounces) sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup finely chopped mint leaves, firmly packed.

Wash apricots, cut into quarters with scissors. Cover with cold water and let stand overnight. Drain, reserving 1½ cups of the liquid. Wash and peel about 4 pounds firm, ripe peaches. Remove pits and cut length in 8-inch slices. Weigh or measure into preserving kettle. Add apricots and reserved liquid. Bring to a boil and simmer, covered, about 15 minutes, or until fruits are tender, stirring occasionally. Add sugar and salt. Mix carefully. Cook slowly until mixture boils, stirring only until sugar is dissolved. Boil about 10 minutes, or until fruits are clear and syrup is somewhat thick, stirring frequently to prevent scorching. Skim. Add mint and reheat just to boiling. Pour into clean, hot, sterilized jars or glasses and seal at once.

Your Figure Madame!

By IDA JEAN KAIN

There is supposed to be a bit of the actress in every woman, but very few women outside the theatre are on to the trick of making an entrance. It is almost instinctive with the actress to make sure of creating a favorable first impression. Before she comes into a room filled with people, she pauses for an imperceptible second, takes a deep breath, tilts her head proudly, and glides in in three-four time.

The actress learns early in her career that the way she carries herself can add or detract from her self-assigned role as a colorful personality. But unless you have had occasion to properly evaluate posture, you won't have any definite thoughts on the subject.

Ina Claire comes into a room with such an air of gaiety that she gives everyone else a lift. Miss Claire is one of the stage stars who have made it their business to learn to walk beautifully. Such perfect coordination is not easily acquired. But there are certain rules which make a tremendous difference in the impression you make.

It pays to take a second to pull yourself together before entering a room. Straighten yourself out and hold your head high. Never come in all slumped over with your eyes downcast. That makes you look timid—or as if you didn't hold a very high opinion of yourself.

When you are ready to sit down, walk over to a chair—take your time about it—and turn around casually. Locate the seat of the chair with the back of one leg, other foot slightly advanced, and lower yourself easily.

The bit of the actress in you should keep you from ever sitting with knees apart, or with knees together and feet apart, or with your legs twined around the chair legs.

Keep your midsection stretched slim. Don't slump down into your girdle or you will not only look awkward, but heavier about the waistline.

When you are ready to get up and go, have one foot slightly forward so the weight can be easily transferred to it for your first step. And in rising from a chair or sitting down, make your hip and thigh muscles do the work. Don't hoist yourself up with your arms.

Cardinal rules for appearing graceful and at ease depend on taking your time. Hurrying makes any woman look flustered and unsure of herself.

Optometry Guards Eyesight
Recognition of defects and deficiencies in vision is the duty of optometry. This requires a knowledge and training gained only by years of study and specialization. A thorough, scientific optometrical examination will disclose what is needed for comfortable, efficient vision. In the process of eye examination, optometrists are interested in muscle balance, brain reaction, psychology, eye fatigue, and temporary distress caused by general health conditions.
Optometrists are trained and qualified to recognize the need for medical attention in the small percentage of cases in which disease is present. The science of optometry has been developed to its present high efficiency in the interests of better vision and for the specific purposes of restoring and preserving human eyesight.

Extension To Air Plant To Be Undertaken
Extensions to facilities of the Mackenzie Air Services Ltd. aircraft repair plant at the Edmonton airport, involving expenditure of more than $1,000,000, are to be undertaken soon, it was learned here Friday.
The extension will employ about 2,000 in building a new double hangar, engine overhauling depot, testing stands and other equipment. Other extensions to the airport facilities here are also being drafted at Ottawa, it is understood.
July 1, 1942, is the date tentatively set for completion of the new plant. Plans for the structures are being drawn by G. H. MacDonald of the firm of MacDonald and Magoon, architects of Edmonton.
LARGE WAREHOUSE
The new depot will be pretty well an exact duplicate of the one now in operation. There will also be a large warehouse for storage of aircraft and parts will be stored and a set of administration offices.
The present plant has been assembling and overhauling craft used at the No. 2 Air Observers' school.
It is understood that airport extensions, in addition to the new repair depot, will include a new concrete runway and new taxi strips in front of the hangars.

Increase In Milk Prices Effective
Milk and cream price increases in Edmonton ordered by the Board of Public Utility Commissioners went into effect Saturday. Announcement of the price increase was made Thursday by G. M. Blackstock, K.C., chairman of the board.
Milk prices have been advanced from 11 to 12 cents a quart; ten per cent sub-standard cream (Superior) from 15 to 17 cents a pint; table cream from 13 to 17 cents a half-pint and whipping cream from 19 to 21 cents a half-pint.
The increase in milk and cream prices was the result of inquiry made by the board at which it was shown that increased living costs to the producer, increased wages paid for help, and the increased cost of herd replacements had considerably reduced the producers' margin of profit.
The board ordered that producers of milk be given an increase of 35 cents per 100 pounds of milk and cream producers an increase of 10 cents per pound table cream butter fat.

Cadets Will Be Enrolled Monday In Air League
Enrolment of air cadets in the Edmonton unit of the Air Cadets League of Canada will start on Monday at the league's headquarters over Mike's news stand.

Before enrolment for service in the cadet group they will be required to pass a medical examination, and photos will be on hand at the league's headquarters to make the necessary examination. The medical qualifications are based on those for the R.C.A.F.
The cadets will wear uniforms of air force grey, cut along lines similar to the R.C.A.F. They will take their training twice weekly, outside camp.
The training covers many of the subjects taught in the Royal Canadian Air Force, such as drill, physical training, aeronautics, navigation, mechanics and the theory of flight.

Skunk Quartette Holds Up Service

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

LLOYDMINSTER, Aug. 16.—Ron Todd, local mail carrier, while travelling on a points trail east of town in the course of making the rounds of rural route No. 2 was held up by four skunks, which held the right of way. As a matter of fact, "Ron" had to back up his truck several yards from the oncoming quartette before he could continue his rounds. Motorists have always had to contend with road hogs but whoever they have to contend with skunks that's just too much of a good thing . . . or a bad thing.

John E. Fraser, of Wetaskiwin, secretary-treasurer, of the Union of Alberta Municipalities since 1930, has resigned that office due to pressure of his duties as city clerk of the city of Wetaskiwin, according to the union's press correspondent, J. Fitzallen, of Vegreville.

He is succeeded by L. P. Minkler, secretary-treasurer of the town of Lacombe since 1931, and at one time a member of the famous law firm of Lougheed and Bennett in Calgary.

Mr. Fraser has been given an honorary life membership in the union in recognition of his faithful and capable service.

CADOMIN

New Garage Is Nearly Completed

Construction of the new Cadomin Motors garage is nearing completion and should be open for business shortly. This is the second time within a year that this building has had to be rebuilt after being fire stroyed by fire. It was one of the most up to date garages in this region. The new building will have added facilities when completed including a paint shop. Harry Smith and Joe Laford, contractors, are in charge of the work.

D. Rocchia, recording secretary of Cadomin local No. 7326, United Mine Workers of America, has resumed work after being injured at the Cadomin mine.

Death Of Purvis Blow To Britain

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(CP)—The New York Times, commenting editorially upon the death in an airplane crash in the United Kingdom of Rt. Hon. Arthur Purvis, said today:

"The death last year of Lord Lothian, the late British ambassador to Washington, was a severe blow to his country. At the time it was said that his loss was comparable to a major defeat of British arms. The damage done to the British cause by his untimely passing, however, was lessened by the presence in Washington of Arthur Bliskie Purvis, head of the British Supply Council in North America, who took over from Lord Halifax, the present ambassador, the general responsibility for British purchases here. He was the link which provided continuity to a work of vital importance to the British cause.

"Now he too is gone—killed in a plane crash in England, where he had gone to report on the progress of his mission. Firm-jawed, gray-haired, Mr. Purvis was a shrewd buyer who knew how to drive a bargain. Yet his fairness and single-hearted frankness won him many friends in this country and Canada, which he knew almost as well as land of his birth. He will be sorely missed in Washington as well as in London."

The New Town Planning

By CECIL S. BURGESS, F.R.A.I.C.
Hon. Sec. Edmonton Town Planning Commission

15.—Slums.

TOWN planning aims at providing the best practically obtainable physical environment for the work and life of town dwellers. All large cities, and even most moderately sized cities, are faced with "slum conditions," which simply means bad living conditions for a considerable number of their people. This is a general and affects so many that it amounts to one of the greatest scandals of our time.

The immediate causes of slum conditions are the pressure of space and the pressure of competition in our cities. The immediate results of these are that owners of land are induced to build as much living accommodation as permitted upon a given area, and that too many tenants crowd into this accommodation.

In consequence, an excessive proportion of floor space becomes occupied by beds, sanitary conveniences become inadequate for the numbers housed, and there is insufficient air in the rooms for the occupiers. There is insufficient separation between the conditions of home life for children are deplorable. The evils are cumulative and have many ramifications. One of the worst of these is a general carelessness and negligence as regards the requirements and decencies of ordinary life. The true purpose of city life is the cultivation of civilization, that is to say, the development of the best faculties and the enjoyment of the blessings of life.

PUT IN REVERSE

In the slum the process of civilization is put in reverse and life becomes degraded. When people have no feeling of private ownership in their homes, when the attainment of pleasant surroundings becomes impossible, then ambition dies, carelessness and negligence prevail, and so conditions go from bad to worse. This may be contrasted with family life in a cottage home surrounded by a garden, in which a corner takes pride and delight.

The problem is so great and so widespread and cries out so loudly for correction that the governments of all countries are beginning to take a most serious interest in it.

COMPREHENSIVE SURVEY

The British government has established a ministry of re-construction which is undertaking the most comprehensive survey of the situation ever contemplated. The excessive drift of population from country to town is to be reduced by bettering conditions of life in the country. The congestion of great cities is to be mitigated by greater dispersal of new industries as may be as well, or even better, placed in smaller centres. The country is to be encouraged to produce more, and more varied, products, both raw and processed. A more general diffusion of life and work is aimed at as opposed to individual life values rather than to farthering processes of degradation.

For example, underground railways are great technical achievements, but actually they are powerful aids in heaping congestion upon congestion in great cities. They add nothing to the joy of life. They degrade life.

This broad general attack on the question of congestion of population is good and necessary. But action of this kind from the top can, of itself, accomplish nothing. If it is not supported from the bottom it will be built on air and tumble down. Cities themselves, actuated by the active power of their individual citizens must establish the necessary foundation.

I have said in previous articles that the new town planning procedure has its rational methods of attacking such problems. The steps in this procedure are: detailed survey of the situation, diagnosis of it, and then a constructive design followed by putting that plan in practice and finally its continuous maintenance in running order.

OFFERED PRIZE

What this means in practice may be illustrated by the following experiment: Some years ago the Royal Institute of British Architects offered a prize for Slum Reconstruction. Competitors were to take a slum area of about 20 acres in an actual city, make a survey and analysis of its condition, and to produce a plan for its reconstruction. The winner of this competition, with the co-operation of the city authorities and with the aid of all information that the city could furnish, investigated the district, noted the number of families involved, the number in each family, the number of children in each family, the nature of the occupation of each worker, their hours of work, the incomes earned, the amount paid in rent. As the congestion had to be reduced it was necessary to find out what could be done with those displaced. Since this was to be a scheme of reconstruction, it was not necessary to detail the diagnosis of bad conditions. These were known beforehand but were simply revealed and confirmed by the survey.

Next, a constructive plan was produced. A prominent element in this was a series of apartment blocks 10 storeys in height. Not just ideal family accommodation, but forced by circumstances, for, by a relatively small clearance of land a few of these blocks could be erected to house a relatively large number of those dispossessed, and only by such high building could sufficient breathing and playing spaces be provided on the area.

HEALTH CENTRE

Some of the provisions that were considered essential should be observed. A health centre and clinic was provided, for the aim of the scheme was to rebuild the run-down health of a community. A small administration building was required, for part of the duties of the administration was to aid in training the tenants in better modes of life than had been induced by the carelessness into which they had been degraded. Special care was taken for the children in clinics and nursery schools with special play facilities.

In planning the apartments varied size of accommodation was provided, actually about 15 per cent. of one room sizes, 25 of two, 34 of three, 22 of four, and six of five rooms. This was not arranged by guess but by actual ascertainment of requirement. Elevators were necessary for the 10-storey apartments. The capacity of these was adjusted to needs, the peak load was for 200 children in school hours, 20 at a time in 10 journeys.

Bicycle and perambulator space was provided, central heating for the whole scheme, public laundries operated on a roster system. It had to be seen to that the various workers could get conveniently transportation to their places of work, there were places for schools and for shopping, and even a beer parlor. This last may shock some, but will warm the hearts of all who truly love their fellowmen. It should be added that the rows of 10-storey buildings were placed at about 200 feet apart so that all could get good light and air. Protected play places were arranged on the tops of these apartments.

This is probably the best scheme for such a purpose that I have examined. At that, it is far from representing ideal living conditions. It was not designed with the expectation of being actually carried out. It would give life value to many, but not money to the promoters. We do not yet fully realize that there is no wealth but life. It is to be hoped, and noted for, that Edmonton may never be forced to entertain such a scheme and then to wake up and find that even that is only a dream.

New Debentures To Be Issued By Woodland Dairy

For some years past the directors of Woodland Dairy Limited have felt that 7 per cent on its preference shares was too high an interest rate to pay under present conditions.

Dividends, however, have been paid at this rate and no dividend is in arrears. Some weeks ago, the directors obtained an order from Mr. Justice O'Connor directing a calling of a meeting of the various shareholders to consider a re-organization of the company's financial set-up.

These meetings were held Friday and the shareholders voted unanimously to accept the offer made by the company which shortly consists of redeeming of its $10 preference shares at $10.30 each plus interest to date of redemption. The company proposes issuing 15,000 $10 debentures bearing 5 per cent and 5½ per cent, all of which are expected to be taken up by the present preferred shareholders, who will be communicated with by the company at an early date.

The meetings were unique in as much as nothwithstanding a reduction in interest every shareholder voted in favor of the proposed re-organization.

Forest Fires Are Sweeping Timber In Central B.C.

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C., Aug. 16—(CP)— Road work crews were converted into firefighters Friday as authorities moved to meet the threat of forest fires blazing in northern British Columbia from the northerly Finney valley to the Fraser valley to the south.

Several days of hot weather have given the fires a foothold in the timberland. The largest blaze is near Stuart lake, 150 miles northwest of here. Other fires are blazing near Great Beaver lake, 50 miles to the northwest on the banks of the Finlay river in the north and near the Akie and Pelly rivers. In the Stuart lake area crews were taken off road work and rushed to battle the flames.

It's the right and only thing to do, and, judging from the way our gas and oil sales are down and our inspection and adjustment work is up, the public are certainly co-operating. A lot of gas and oil can be saved by proper adjustments. Look at those cars going by. They're crawling compared to the way they used to go. No, we have had no squawks from our American tourists, and they are rolling through as thick as ever. Drum Major — By Vida Huret

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO (Cont'd)

To Kathleen, alone in Mrs. Donalson's apartment, the hours dragged endlessly. She wanted to talk to Jimmy but her aunt had warned her not to answer the telephone. There was nothing to do but look through the magazines and listen to the radio, until that evening when at long last Aunt Nora came home and Jimmy was with her. Kathleen ran into his arms feeling as if they had been separated for months.

"Oh, darling!" she cried hiding her face on his shoulder. "Isn't this terrible! I've brought you nothing but trouble, Jimmy! I'm sure Daddy will go out to question your mother."

"She can take it," Jimmy said calmly. "There's only one answer to this, Kathleen. We are going to apply for a marriage license the day after tomorrow."

"On my birthday," she repeated. "That's right. It will have to be published in the paper for three days but by that time it will be too late for your father to stop us."

"He will never forgive me," Kathleen said soberly. "But it's the only way. Oh, Jimmy, I hope you'll never be sorry. I may be young but I'm going to try very hard to be a good wife."

KISSES HER

"Shut up," he said tenderly kissing her while Nora turned away her eyes brimming with tears. There was something about these two, so young and full of hope and love that it made her want to cry.

And so conceal it she said briskly. "Come now, children. Plenty of time for that later. I'm hungry. Let's go down to my apartment and have some dinner."

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

THE day before her birthday Kathleen spent in seclusion in Aunt Nora's apartment. But she was too happy to be lonely. Jimmy telephoned at noon and came up that evening to report that her father had kept his threat to go to the police.

"They did question Mother," Jimmy admitted. "But fortunately she didn't know anything about it yet. Although she said she knew you and you have been at our flat for dinner."

"I hope she isn't angry," Kathleen said anxiously.

"Not with you, but she certainly hasn't much use for your father. After all, it isn't exactly pleasant to be questioned by a detective."

"I know, Jimmy! I'm sorry."

"Never mind, Sweet! No one is blaming you," Jimmy comforted.

HAPPY EVENING

Aunt Nora had a dinner engagement so they had a long happy evening before the fire. Jimmy had found an apartment he thought she would like. They would apply for their marriage license then he would take her to look at it. There was furniture to be bought too and plans for a brief honeymoon over the weekend.

"Where would you like to go?" Jimmy inquired.

Kathleen shook her head.

"It doesn't matter."

"Yosemite will be deserted, but it might be fun."

"Whatever you say, Jimmy."

The idea of being Jimmy's wife was so blissful she would gladly have stayed in the city, but he wanted it otherwise. When Aunt Nora returned she found them still discussing it, unconscious of the time.

"It's very late." Nora said "And tomorrow will be a busy day for both of you."

"I get it," Jimmy laughed. "Okay, I'm on my way. But I'll be calling for you tomorrow, Kathleen. We'll go to the city hall at noon."

It was scarcely 10 minutes later when the buzzer of Aunt Nora's apartment rang.

"Must be Jimmy coming back," Kathleen cried, but Nora frowned. "It's probably one of your father's detectives. Go into the bedroom, Kathleen, and close the door while I see."

She discovered that she was right. One of the men who had found Kathleen before said, "Miss O'Connor, I have a warrant here to search your apartment."

Nora was furious but she stood aside.

"It won't do you any good," she bluffed.

"No?" he asked skeptically. "Well, we'll soon see about that. You should have been more careful than to let the young man come here if you really wished to conceal her whereabouts. Besides the desk clerk tells me that she arrived several nights ago and has not been seen since."

DESPERATE

"My brother looked for her here the other day," Nora said desperately. "I can't understand why he should ask you to do so again."

"We can't take his word for it. We have to find out for ourselves. The girl has disappeared. We have already found that she took a taxi here. And tonight the young man who is interested in her was seen leaving this apartment. Therefore we must search it."

"Go ahead then." Nora said coldly. "Why argue about it?"

As she spoke he had thrown open the bedroom door where Kathleen stood.

"So it's you," she smiled disarmingly.

The detective whose hard boiled exterior made an Irish heart of his own smiled in turn.

"I'm sorry about this, little lady! You ought to be spanked for causing so much trouble."

"I'm not going to cause any more," she promised.

"Good. Get your hat now and we'll be going back to your father."

"I'm not going back," the girl stated calmly. "You're just a little bit too late. You are I'm 18 now."

She pointed to the electric clock on her aunt's dressing table.

"It's 15 minutes past 12. My birthday has begun."

The detective frowned then laughed.

"But how do I know you're telling me the truth?" he demanded.

"You can telephone my father," she suggested.

"It is my duty to take you home; then you can settle this in court," he said regretfully.

Aunt Nora had gone to the closet and was rummaging on the shelf.

PROOF

"Here it is," she cried excitedly. "Here is your proof." Holding up a large dusty volume marked "Family Bible" she turned to the page headed by the names of Matthew O'Connor and Mary Agnes Moore followed by Kathleen's birth date.

"It's a bit irregular," he admitted, "but I am not the one to argue with evidence in the Holy book."

Kathleen patted his arm. "I'm glad it was you and not some one else I feel," she added audaciously, "as if I really know you after the other time."

As they returned to the living room, he said, "I suppose you'll be marrying the young man now?"

Kathleen smiled.

"That's right. We're applying for our license tomorrow."

"Then I should like to be the first to wish you happiness," he said gallantly.

"For politeness and courtesy in the discharge of duty the San Francisco police can not be beat." Aunt Nora laughed as he bowed himself out.

Kathleen was dancing around the room.

"Oh, Aunt Nora wasn't he sweet? Do you know how wonderful it feels to realize that I am free? That no one can ever make me do anything again?"

Nora fazed at her soberly.

"You'll never be free," she predicted. "The minute a girl falls in love she loses her freedom. But maybe it's better that way. Who knows?"

Kathleen said she did. In the City of San Francisco there had never been a girl so proud and happy applying for a wedding license. She walked down the steps of the city hall feeling that she would like to stop everyone on the street and tell them.

Jimmy took her to see the apartment he had chosen then they had lunch. But they were too excited to do anything but stare at each other.

CUT OUT NOTICE

Two nights later the notice of their application was printed. To see her name with Jimmy's where anyone could read it made Kathleen feel there was no longer any doubt about it.

Matthew however was not so easily convinced. He knew he had lost when he read his paper that evening. But he still could not believe that just because his daughter was 18 he could no longer influence her.

He had made a grave mistake in trying to force her to go to Hollywood. The idea of a career would have to be renounced at present. But he wouldn't care so much, Matt told himself, if only she would not rush into marriage with this Jimmy Crane.

She could work at the music store or just keep house for him if she would only come home. He was sure if she did so her affection could eventually be re-won. It was not until he lost it that he realized how much it had meant to him.

But although he intended to approach her diplomatically the sight of Jimmy and Kathleen together when he entered his sister's apartment made Matt lose his temper all over again.

Opening—♥ 10. 16

Here is an interesting hand I picked up in one of the junior events. Declarer played low from dummy on the opening lead and let the king win. Now came a fight that was a credit to both sides.

East had a difficult problem to exit since the obvious spade lead might help South develop his best suit. Yet he let the nine of spades, trusting that West would read the situation.

West did—he let the trick ride to dummy's jack. On the low lead back to the jack of diamonds, West again had the nerve to hold off. South led the king of spades and again West held off, to see what dummy would discard. North let go a club

The ace was forced by another spade lead, dummy letting go a low diamond. West exited with the nine of clubs, on which dummy and East played low. South winning. Now declarer did not make the mistake of cashing his spades at once and squeezing dummy. He led back the six of clubs, and the defence could find no way to avoid giving declarer his ninth trick.

How different the play would be in catch-as-catch-can bridge! The defence would take the king of hearts and three aces in a hurry, leaving declarer 13 winners to win nine tricks.
